TALMADGE INAUGURATED FOR SECOND TERM; COMMITTEE VOTE UNANIMOUS FOR $3 TAGS

President Seeks Action To Control Staple Surpluses

Proposal Outlined to Secretary Wallace and Group of Southern Congressmen at White House Conference.

FOUR COUNTRIES INVOLVED IN PLAN

Agreement May Be Patterned Along Lines of International Wheat Pact, Leaders Told.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—(AP)—The Roosevelt administration tonight was working toward an international agreement aimed at the stabilization of cotton exports and cotton prices.

Secretary Wallace and a group of southern congressmen conferred today with Mr. Roosevelt on the problems of the south's principal crop and the nation's foremost export product.

At the presidential press conference word was given that the proposed pact might be patterned along the lines of the international wheat agreement, and aimed at the control of surpluses.

Under this the principal wheat-producing nations agreed to limit their exports. This arrangement, however, broke down when Argentina failed to abide by its quota.

Hull conference.

Secretary Hull was one of those taking part in the White House conference yesterday at which the proposed cotton plan was outlined. Today, the secretary of state added Italy to the 14 countries with which negotiations for reciprocal trade agreements are in progress.

Any cotton agreement, officials said, would include in all probability only four countries—the United States, Brazil, India and Egypt. Several other countries produce the staple but they were said to consume ordinarily all they raise and more.

Tentative feelers already have been put out by diplomatic cables.

Despite the failure of the wheat accord, officials pointed out that Brazil—which has been expanding its cotton acreage—might be willing to enter into an agreement and to abide strictly by its terms.

The United States is one of the principal consumers of Brazil's leading crop—coffee. Failure to observe any cotton stabilization plan entered into might affect this country's coffee purchases.

Seeking Trade Treaty.

The United States and Brazil have been negotiating for some time for a reciprocal trade treaty. It has been held up pending ratification of the suggested cotton stabilization scheme.

Administration experts emphasized that the latest move was not an attempt to increase cotton exports to prevent the excess from driving prices down. He feels an international understanding would be better for the world over to obtain better prices.

English, German Lexicons With Words Under-scored Found in Bronx Home, Prosecutor Reveals.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 16.—(AP)—Discovery of English and German dictionaries in the Bronx home of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, with words underlined, was disclosed tonight by Attorney-General David T. Wilentz, of New Jersey.

Wilentz made the disclosure in answer to a defense question raised at Hauptmann's murder trial today—why the same man would mispell simple words and correctly spell the more difficult ones in the ransom letters.

"Hauptmann is a dictionary student," Wilentz declared, "and we will prove it."

The state, he added, found two sets of dictionaries in the Bronx home of Charles A. Lindbergh's first-born son, lay buried in a thick white Hauptmann allegedly wrote 14 lying letters and snatched the $50,000 ransom in a Bronx cemetery.

A negro laborer, William Allen, stumbled across the baby's shallow grave on May 12, 1932, more than two months after he was stolen from his home.

He will testify and then the body, found faced down, its skull horribly fractured, will be identified.

State's attorneys said it would not be necessary to recall Colonel Lindbergh

Thus the state, intent on sending the grim carpenter to the electric chair, is ready to show how Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's first-born son lay buried in a thick white Hauptmann allegedly wrote 14 lying letters and snatched the $50,000 ransom in a Bronx cemetery.

Talmadge Takes Oath, Begins Second Term as Georgia Governor

INAUGURAL SPEECH REVIEWS RECORD

Committee Promises Quick Action on Remaining Bills Included in Talmadge Program.

Inaugurated for his second term, Governor Talmadge Wednesday called upon the general assembly to carry out his legislative program and within two hours the house committee on the state of the republic answered his plea by voting unanimous approval of the first two of the chief executive's measures, ratification of his tag orders of the last three years and a bill making the $3 tag a permanent law.

Two other measures, sponsored by the chief executive, will be taken up today by the committee, Chairman H. B. Edwards announcing they would be the bills to divert accrued funds of the highway department to pay school teachers and Confederate pensioners and to abolish the veterinary division of the department of agriculture and place control of veterinary activities under the commissioner of agriculture.

In the chamber of the house of representatives, where the two houses met in joint session, the chief executive delivered an extemporaneous inaugural speech in which he reviewed the accomplishments of his first two years as governor and outlined, in general, part of his program for the future.

He proposed that the legislature fix a limit on the amount of taxes counties and municipalities could levy against property, and also urged the passage of a bill to order equalization of freight rates throughout the country.

1. Adoption by the legislature of a resolution asking congress to order equalization of freight rates throughout the country.

2. Passage of a "full crew" law requiring every railroad train to have at least five members in its crew.

3. Diversion of $2,000,000 highway funds to pay past-due debts to public schools and Confederate pensioners, in proportion to the debts owed by the state.

4. Passage of a bill to be sponsored by the regents of the University System officials of the state, and to put property of the system on the same basis as other state properties.

(This bill would kill a pending application for a $2,800,000 public works loan and grant to the University System for a building program, since it would remove the corporate status of the board of regents and make it

Bad Weather Halts Rickenbacker Dash

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—(AP)—Eddie Rickenbacker, attempting a one-day flight from New Orleans to New York and return, ran into such heavy weather on his way south tonight that he landed his plane at the Washington airport here and prepared to spend the night.

The flyer reported that between Richmond, Va., and Goldsboro, N. C., he ran into snow, rain and fog, leaving him hopeless to reach New Orleans tonight in such weather, he said, the course was reversed and he returned to the national capital.

Rickenbacker was not certain whether he would continue later to New Orleans, but in any event determined to spend the night here.

COUNTY REFUSES AID TO HOSPITALS

Key's Plea Falls on Deaf Ears; Mayor Flays Salary Hikes by Fulton

County aid to the city of Atlanta in lifting some of the load of maintaining the municipality's four charity hospitals, including Grady, was refused Wednesday afternoon after Mayor James L. Key presided over the city's employees, who are facing heavy salary cuts this year.

The refusal to accede to a request of the city's budget commission, which the mayor presented to the Fulton board, calling for an appropriation of $335,000, half of the cost of operating the hospitals, will mean a wholesale slash of salaries of 1,900 non-school employees, Key said following the meeting at the courthouse.

Despite the fact that Key leveled a scathing fire at the action of the commission last week in raising salaries of county employees $150,000 for 1935, and a warning from Atlanta's chief executive that the people of the county do not approve of it, the commission firmly declined to take any action on Key's request.

There remained only one alternative, Key said, and that is immediate opening of a municipal liquor dispensary and diversion of profits into the municipal treasury.

Pleas for Liquor Store.

When the commission declined to allocate a single additional dollar for hospitalization, Key retorted: "Then let me open my liquor store. We've got to have money from some-

Kidnaped Boy, Three Others Hurt as Quartet of Robbers Is Chased for 30 Miles.

LA SALLE, Ill., Jan. 16.—(AP)—A gallant sheriff, a brave bank cashier and a bank robber died and three men and a boy were wounded today in a series of gun battles that raged through three counties.

Three pitched engagements, fought with guerrilla savagery by 65 participants, took place along a 30-mile line as a quartet of gangsters sought to blast their way to freedom after they had been beaten back in an attempt to loot the Leonore (Ill.) State Bank.

The lives of Charles Bundy, 54, the bank official, and Sheriff Glenn Axline, of Marshall county, were snuffed out by the gunman's bullets.

Commits Suicide.

Melvin Leis, alias David Leech, of Rockford, committed suicide a moment before his confederates were captured by a sharp-shooting posse on a farm near McNabb, Ill.

Deputy Sheriff Reins Brown, of Marshall county; Charles Seipp, member of the La Salle County board of supervisors; Norbert Mass, 15-year-old Leonore lad, and one of the thugs, Arthur Thielen, of Rockford, were wounded.

The other two raiders were caught after coming unscathed through a hail of more than 100 bullets.

Three of the gunmen slipped into the bank through a coal chute last night while the La Salle county hamlet of Leonore slumbers peacefully.

The "fourth" set in a car near the Bundy home. James Adamson, a bank guard, became suspicious. With Bundy and another guard, Leonore Smith, he went to the bank about 8:45 a. m. They saw that the car had been driven to the rear of the bank. Bundy opened the door and cried, "There's some-body inside."

Three Flee Empty-Handed.

The three would-be looters fled empty-handed to the George Yusco garage. They waved their weapons, forced young Mass and a salesman into a machine and roared out of town. The lookout sped away in his auto. A posse took after him.

The fugitive was overtaken after a short chase. He was being marched to town when the other three gangsters and their hostages reappeared. The thugs opened fire on the posse.

JOHNSON SCORES COURT ENTRY PLEA

Move To Join League of Nations Charged After F. D. R.'s Message.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—(AP)—A burst of opposition oratory, asserting that the United States was moving toward entry into the League of Nations, today greeted in the senate a special message from President Roosevelt urging American adherence to the world court.

In a 22-line message, one of the briefest by a chief executive on a major subject, Mr. Roosevelt joined his predecessor presidents—Harding, Coolidge and Hoover—in advocating adherence of the three protocols now pending "in such a form as not to defeat or to delay the objective of adherence."

Almost immediately a blistering opposition drive began. Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, ordinarily the president's strongest supporter in minority ranks, took the floor to flay the ratification resolution as "the first step" toward America entering the League of Nations.

With a biting sarcasm that kept the old observers recalled the League of Nations fight that split the senate 15 years ago.

In his message, read just before, the president had asserted the "move-

"Ma" and Fred Barker, Sought in Bremer Case, Killed by U. S. Agents in Florida.

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA, F.A., Jan. 16.—(AP) Trapped in their Florida hideout today by federal agents, "Ma" and Fred Barker, mother and son, sought in the kidnapping of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul brewer and banker, were killed in a six-hour gun battle.

The agents said they found four $1,000 bills on Fred Barker's body but declined to say if they found any money in the house, the garage and the large yard, all of which they searched thoroughly, using flashlights after nightfall. No one was permitted inside the yard.

Reports at first were that two men and a woman died in the withering shower of lead from government machine guns, which led to the belief one of the men was Alvin Karpis, also hunted in the Bremer abduction. Later it was established only Barker and his mother were occupants of the handsome home on Lake Weir.

Machine guns were found beside the bodies of both victims. Machine

Illegal for it to contract debts beyond its fiscal year of operation.

The house chamber was so packed that many members of the governor's staff were forced to stand throughout the ceremony.

Oath Administered.
The oath of office was delivered by Chief Justice Richard B. Russell Sr., of Georgia, after John B. Wilson, secretary of state, had delivered to the governor the great seal of the state.

The seal was handed back to Mr. Wilson by the governor after he had taken the oath.

The governor reviewed at length his action in cutting the price of auto tags for all motor vehicles to $3, and said it had brought great savings to the people, at little or no reduction in revenues to the state.

He told of his prolonged controversy with the old highway board but did not mention his use of national guardsmen in ousting the old highway board. He said he was "proud to say the new board has saved nearly a quarter of a million dollars in overhead expenses during the 18 months it has been in office."

The governor discussed his ouster of the old public service commission on charges of neglect of duty, and pointed to reductions in numerous utility rates by the new commission.

He stressed tax reduction and economy in government throughout his address.

"The only way to have an honest government is to keep it poor," he said.

Urging that the legislature place a limitation on local taxes, he said that after he cut the state and valorem taxes one mill, or 20 per cent, he was told by taxpayers in some counties that the counties had increased their local taxes two mills.

"You couldn't do a better thing at this session of the general assembly than to place a limit on the amount of taxes counties and municipalities can levy," he said.

He did not say what limitation he desired.

The governor was cheered frequently during his address.

HOMER H. ARRINGTON, ROME LEADER, PASSES

ROME, Ga., Jan. 16.—Homer H. Arrington, 60, president of the Curry-Arrington wholesale and retail drug companies, and prominent Rome citizen, died at a local hospital today.

He is survived by his wife, the former Miss Eliza Fite, of Cedartown, and one daughter, Mrs. H. G. Bowie, of Rome.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 3 p. m. from the residence on East Fourth street with interment in Myrtle Hill cemetery.

He died during his address. He did not touch on the most controversial issue before the assembly—prohibition repeal or modification.

The chief executive arrived at the capitol for the inaugural ceremonies at 11 a. m. having been escorted from the governor's mansion by a troop of national guard cavalry. He rode in an automobile. On the west entrance to the capitol, various national guard units saluted their chief as he arrived. Other national guardsmen were inside the house chamber, as an escort of honor.

Governor Talmadge mentioned the use of some of these national guardsmen to quell labor disturbances during the state last fall, and at Rossville recently, saying that "whenever a man quits work and strikes, which is his privilege, he ought not interfere with somebody who wants to work."

Immediately after the adjournment of the inaugural session, while most of their colleagues attended the reception given by Governor and Mrs. Talmadge at the executive mansion, the Edwards committee moved over to a committee room at the city hall where the first Talmadge bill, ratification of the $3 tag order was voted without debate and his bill to make the $3 tag permanent was given unanimous approval after an amendment to make tag prices for commercial trucks and buses was discussed briefly and then withdrawn.

The two measures, introduced by Speaker E. D. Rivers, not only were given the committee's approval but they also were made the bills of the individual members of the committee.

Graduated Scale Debated.
On the bill to make the $3 tag permanent, Representative Pound, of Hancock county, seconded by Representative Bennett, of Ware county, offered the amendment to fix a graduated scale for trucks and buses, a move which was opposed by Chairman Edwards, who spoke as a member of the committee.

Representative Williams, of Coffee county, and Representative Jackson, of Bleckley county, said that while he favored the governor's program in its main issues he felt buses and trucks should be made to pay more because they bring additional wear and tear on the highways.

Representative Bennett said he agreed with him and pointed out that while he supported the governor and was elected on a Talmadge platform his constituents knew he differed with the governor's views on tags for trucks and buses.

Edwards, Williams and Jackson quelled all opposition when they pointed out trucks and buses do pay additional revenue to the state in the form of license and mileage fees to the public service commission and gasoline taxes, stressing the fact they use more gasoline per mile than do passenger cars.

Representative Blaise, of Brooks county, joined in this plea, said he felt the larger commercial vehicles should pay an extra tax but when Williams and Jackson informed Pound, Bennett and Hall they would support any measure which might be offered increasing the price of the tags bought from the public service commission or the mileage fees they withdrew the amendment and made approval of the bill unanimous.

Committee Program.
Chairman Edwards said he hoped to dispose of the veterinary and diversion bills today, to take up the regents' bill Monday and complete the handling of the Talmadge program by his committee Tuesday.

"We will not need more than a couple of hours on these bills, to which we will give our undivided attention Monday," the chairman said. "Some people may think we are putting these bills through the committee the same way Huey Long puts his bills through in Louisiana but sometimes I think a little of that method helps the state. Anyhow, all matters contained in the bills were made issues in the governor's campaign last year and he carried 156 out of the state's 159 counties, so the people of the state must want these laws passed."

Service Medals Awarded.
Distinguished service medals were awarded Frank P. Jamison, charter member of the band with more than 20 years' service, and William B. Heister, chairman of the finance committee.

A memorial service to members who have died during the last year was conducted by Noble David Myers, who was assisted by the Yaarab chapters and the Yaarab Million Dollar band.

A glowing tribute was paid to the retiring potentate, Dewald Cohen, when the auditor's report revealed that the temple was in excellent financial condition and that fewer members had been lost during the last year than in any year in the last five.

He has held every elective office in Yaarab Temple, starting with Oriental guide and progressing through high priest and prophet, assistant rabban and chief rabban to potentate. He has been a member of Yaarab for 20 years.

He is a past director of the Royal Order of Jesters and has been venerable master of the Lodge of Perfection in the Scottish Rite for three years. Under the rule of Potentate Walter Andrews he gained much distinction as publicity agent for the temple, or official disseminator of the sacred bull.

Before coming to Atlanta he was editor and manager of Boyce's Weeklies, at Chicago.

Address at Inaugural

Governor Eugene Talmadge's inaugural address Wednesday at noon in full:

Two years ago I raised my hand to Almighty God and subscribed to the oath which I have just repeated. During these past two years we have been here in the state busy, and I think we have accomplished some things that are fundamental, and I wish to briefly give an accounting of this stewardship to the general assembly of Georgia.

Two years ago, just after the general assembly adjourned, there was certain legislation which had been pending before that body and which had been voted on by the people. The house and senate did not get together on this legislation. So right after the legislature adjourned I issued an executive order, declaring the price, or exempting our people, from paying more than $2 for any automobile, truck and bus tags in the state of Georgia.

That action, my fellow countrymen, saved the people in Georgia, in 1933, $2,515,000.33. That same executive order was repeated in 1934, and during the year 1934 the amount that was suspended and left with the people amounted to $3,042,672.83.

MORE TAGS SOLD, GAS TAXES INCREASE UNDER $2 TAG.

However, I might add that during 1932 we had 218,198 motor vehicles registered in Georgia, and so people had many more tags at the old high price. During 1933, or after the reduction of the price of tags to $2, it rose to $10.48 for motor vehicles, and in 1934 that number rose to 396,685—or an increase in 1934 over 1932 of 109,487 motor-driven vehicles in the state of Georgia.

I might add again that the increase in gasoline consumption was $2,973,242.55; that is, the tax alone was increased in the 6-cent tax that comes to the state in the amount of $2,973,242.55 during the year 1934 over the year 1932, and with the amount received from the tags and the extra increase in the amount of the gas tax, there is a very little difference in the revenue of the state by the price of tags being reduced to a flat rate of $2.

I might add this: That this 109,487 additional motor vehicles on the highways of Georgia certainly furnish thousands of jobs to people working in garages, selling tires and automobile fixtures.

LOW PRICED TAGS SEEN RECOVERY AID.

I believe that a step out of our economic depression was gained from the reduction to the flat rate of $2 for tags, and this contributed more than any other move that could have been made at that time.

After that, my fellow countrymen, I made a trip all over Georgia. I knew that millions of dollars were being expended by the highway department. I had a list of the expenditures, which was filed with me, under the provision of the budget law, which you enacted in 1931, and on that list there were over 300 engineers, about 175 linemen, roadmen and draftsmen. Having just made the trip over the state, and seeing so many examples of a dozen or more engineers surveying a road that had already been graded, and bridges that were already built, I thought that the tax time had come, and that the head of the highway department should be reduced, especially when schools and other departments of state were underpaid, and our school teachers had not in some cases had their salaries in two years.

I knew we could not tax our already tax-burdened people more, and I thought the thing to do was to cut down all useless overhead in that giant highway department that was spending over one-half of the revenue of the state. I insisted that the highway department accept the amendment of the budget. When they refused to accept these amendments, and wished to operate without any budget, it became my duty to place

IF YOUR BREATH HAS A SMELL YOU CAN'T FEEL WELL

When we eat too much, our food decays in our bowels. Our friends smell the decay coming out of our mouth and call it bad breath. We feel the poison of this decay all over our body. It makes us gloomy, grouchy and no good for anything. What makes the food decay in the bowels? Well, when we eat too much, our bile can't digest it. What is the bile juice? It is the most vital digestive juice in our body. Unless 2 pints of it are flowing from our liver into our bowels every day, our movements get hard and constipated and 8% of our food decays in our 22 feet of bowels. This decay sends poison all over our body every minute.

When our friends smell our bad breath (but we don't) and we feel like a whipped tomato, don't use a mouthwash or take a laxative. Get at the cause. Take Carter's Little Liver Pills which gently start the bile flowing. It is offered you, but don't buy it, for it may be a colorless, tasteless pill, which does not touch, gripes and scalds the rectum in many people. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. What you want is a 50-cent box. ©1934, C.M. Co.

VOICES PRIDE IN HIGHWAY SAVINGS.

I appointed three new men, and I am proud to tell you that since the reorganization of the highway department, and I am quoting the auditor's figures, we have saved in the overhead expenses in 1933 $1,124,088.17, and in 1934 $1,134,000.00.

There were other activities that the law imposed upon me as the chief executive of the state. During the war, utility rates were advanced in some instances 100 per cent, and we did not care. We thought they should be because the price of labor and materials and everything else was getting higher.

But, after the war, instead of the utility rates coming down, in a great many instances they advanced, and freight rates, in particular, had advanced three times after our boys came back from across the seas.

My countrymen, I looked into the law. I looked into the rate charges. I knew my telephone down in Tallapoosa county on the farm, had advanced from $1.50 per month to $2.25 per month, and I found that here in Atlanta the cost of business telephone had advanced from $5.50 to $10.

RIDING ON TRAINS WAS LONESOME.

The rates and passenger rates had advanced so that if you shipped produce over the railroads it would hardly pay the cost for education. I knew that before passenger rates were lowered, even the lawyers for the railroad companies, who rode on passes, hated to ride on the trains because they were so lonesome.

A petition was filed with me, complaining of the action of the old public service commission by the Georgia Federation of Labor. On this petition I filed a rule nisi to show cause why the rates should not be removed if the charges were sustained, and after an investigation of 19 days these charges were removed. At this point: All five members of the commission swore on direct questions by me that the old rates were reasonable and right to keep the power rate and telephone rates and the transportation rates up at the price they were when cotton was 40 cents a pound and corn $2 a bushel. After cotton dropped to 5 cents a pound and corn to 40 cents a bushel, these rates were kept just as high.

We removed the old public service commission and appointed five new men, and a special report of the evidence that was before me, and the petition will be filed with you, ladies and gentlemen of the general assembly, on the 11th day of this session, and on that list there were over 300 engineers, about 175 linemen, roadmen and draftsmen. Having just made the trip over the state, and seeing so many examples of a dozen or more engineers surveying a road that had already been graded, and bridges that were already built, I thought that the tax time had come, and that the head of the highway department should be reduced, especially when schools and other departments of state were underpaid, and our school teachers had not in some cases had their salaries in two years.

I knew we could not tax our already tax-burdened people more, and I thought the thing to do was to cut down all useless overhead in that giant highway department that was spending over one-half of the revenue of the state. I insisted that the highway department accept the amendment of the budget. When they refused to accept these amendments, and wished to operate without any budget, it became my duty to place

REPORTS RESULTS OF UTILITIES BOARD.
After the appointment of the new commission, they took up the reduction of utility rates and want to report to you what they did.

They reduced the freight rates—the interstate rates, that is, the hauling inside the state, and this is the only one they have any jurisdiction over, 17 per cent, and in some instances more.

SEVERE HANDICAP TO GEORGIA FIRMS.

Talk about calling on manufacturers and businesses to come into Georgia and this section, and they have a handicap of 23.1-3 per cent on transportation charges. Before this general assembly adjourns, I hope that you will pass a resolution calling on our congress to equalize the rates and make them on a mileage basis from all points in the country.

I want to take time to itemize them, but the new public service commission has not shown any favoritism. They have a conservative estimate of the handicap in utility rates in Georgia per annum, without the increase in business on account of new customers, which amounts to over $30,000,000 per year. I wish to say when they reduced the telephone rates in Atlanta from $10 to $7.50 they reduced the others in proportion.

During the first six months after these reductions went into effect, the telephone company put in over 40,000 additional telephones in Atlanta alone. When they reduced the rates of the Georgia Power Company and other power companies, I had a statement from the companies that their demands for new installations were so large they could hardly get the men to put them in.

Now people know what happened on the railroads when they cut their rates. I used to go to the Terminal station, and to the depot at Waycross or Albany, and there would be more employees than passengers there. But now, take a trip to these stations, and you will see them filled with people who are riding on the trains, and the old trains are stretched out and getting longer.

CROWDED TRAINS NEED FULL CREWS.
Right here I want to say that with reasonable freight rates and transportation rates, you are crowded on the trains and need a full-crew law.

My countrymen, I wish to state to you one other activity we have had. Along in July, after our efforts to get the tax receipts known, Look at the highway department, it was my duty to levy the state ad valorem tax.

The law provides that we cannot exceed a levy of five mills. For years it has been five mills, with varying exceptions. Some have reduced it to 4.93, and some to 4.98. John G. Gordon levied a flat rate of four mills and for the first time since Gordon was governor of Georgia, we again docked and cut the ad valorem tax 20 per cent, and put on a flat rate of four mills.

In 1933, the reduction of one mill in the state ad valorem tax saved the people of this state, and left in their pockets, $1,245,220.25. In 1934, the assessment had been reduced on property, and we saved on this reduction of one mill $979,773.20.

Right here I wish to call your attention to this: The people here who get their tax receipts known, Look at them—the smallest bracket in the state tax, and I think the reason for it is because it has always been under the spotlight.

The state auditor published the rolls in the newspapers, it would be used in practically every state campaign. We have kept it reasonable and kept it down.

But this is the sad part. I have received letters from residents of counties saying that as soon as the state cut the value of the tax one mill the county added on two mills.

I wish to call your attention, ladies and gentlemen of the general assembly, to the fact that there are counties in Georgia with a county levy, independent of the school levy, as low as three mills. They are up-to-date, thriving counties, with good towns and good schools and progressive and are getting along all right.

ON LOCAL TAX RATES.
Ladies and gentlemen of the general assembly, you could not do a better thing at this session of the general assembly than to do for your counties and municipalities just what has been done to the state. Place a limit on the amount of taxes they can levy.

Now, my countrymen, these are some of the activities that we have had during the past two years while you were away.

I welcome you here, the state welcomes you, the people of Georgia, I mean the working people, the men and women who are out trying to work for a living and pay taxes, and are not looking for relief—these are the people who are looking to you.

Now, let's see. There has been a great deal said as to where the money goes in Georgia. I wish to state to you in a brief way where some of it goes.

Our largest expenditure, not of the state but of the state with the help of the federal government, (and the last all-around record received from them was $10,000,000), is for highway purposes, but the largest expenditure of the state is $12,000,000 from that department.

The schools of Georgia cost its people $16,792,185.50 per year. In other words, Georgia taxes per pupil, white and black, an amount to $17.75 per year for education. I know that the state government pays out of matriculation fees, or other incidental fees that are charged.

REFERENCES TO TEACHERS.
Right here, I wish to say that there has been an indebtedness to our school teachers scattered over the state, some in one county and some in another, of approximately $2,000,000 or over. There has also been an indebtedness to our Confederate pensioners. They are receiving 100 per cent of the amount you gave them now per year, but in the past they have not been paid in full and some are still outstanding.

In the highway department, we have saved $2,000,000 in cash and are asking you members of the general assembly to take this $2,000,000 and divert it for the purpose of paying up the past due indebtedness to the school teachers and Confederate pensioners proportionately.

I wish also to call your attention to this: The constitution of this state provides, and I am glad we have judges of the court of appeals and the supreme court listening to my words, that the state, the counties and the municipalities, that cannot incur a debt beyond the fiscal year, and that is the calendar year, with the exception of a bond issue—any they made an exception for educational purposes.

Georgia was the first state to put that limitation in the constitution and Bob Toombs was the author of the constitutional convention of 1877.

After this limitation was put in our constitution in 1877, 10 other states in the Union have put in the same constitutional limitation as Georgia.

Georgia is better off financially than any other state in the Union.

STATE BONDS.
Her bonds are selling at a premium of from 17 to 20 per cent above par, pays on interstate shipments 33.1-3 per cent, and is in the position of the fundaments of our constitution.

I wish to say now that I challenge the moral right of a government to spend more money than it has.

If you get $3,000,000 from your tax, how can you spend more than that and be morally right? If you do, you are putting a burden on the people you represent.

In other words, if Judge Russell, Charlie Redwine and I were a committee to whom a private individual had turned over $50,000 to go to New York to buy a bill of goods, and we went up there, and bought the goods and shipped them back to the person with a bill of lading, we would not be acting morally right, as trustees.

I think this comparison is identical. After all, we are trustees of every one in Georgia.

During my campaign, I told you if I was your governor two more years, I would pay up the balance of the state's indebtedness, in toto, and not raise your taxes one cent.

Let's see what has been done along this line during the past two years: When I came into office there was a total indebtedness outstanding of $1,234,353.24, and on December 31, 1932, of $7,523,835.82. This amount was reduced in 1933 to $3,354,353.24, and on December 31, 1934, this debt had been paid, and $4,024,566.15. We have the $2,000,000 saved up in the highway department, and if the general assembly sees fit to divert it for the payment of the back indebtedness to our school teachers and Confederate veterans, this indebtedness will be cut in half.

REPORTS ON OTHER MAJOR ACTIVITIES.
Now, my countrymen, there have been other major activities in the past of which I had the power to approve or disapprove, and I wish to report to you my actions:

There was a great deal said in regard to the state's borrowing as the Georgia Power Company or the government as possible. It was argued that 30 per cent was a grant and that 30 per cent was a grant and the interest was to be paid on the remaining 70 per cent, it was of great interest to every state and county to develop and put up all the buildings they needed.

This was based on the best of motives and I admire it.

I had just taken the oath of office at the session of the legislature that I have taken this morning, to uphold the constitution and laws of our state.

There were 17 other states in the Union that had the same constitutional limitation that we have in Georgia, that they could not incur a debt beyond the fiscal year.

Let's see what has been done in Georgia.

NEW PENITENTIARY STARTS IN TATNALL.
There was a great deal said about building a penitentiary in Tatnall county. I made several trips to Washington to see what could be done about it. Mr. Tolson, the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said that the only way we could borrow money in our state would be for the federal government to buy a tract of land in Georgia, put up the buildings, and if Georgia agrees to rent it, they will put a rental value on it and at the end of a certain number of years the property will return to the state of Georgia. This rental contract was approved, and also the building of this penitentiary in Tatnall county and the contract has been signed. It is up to the general assembly of Georgia if they wish to rent it year by year. In this Georgia is safe.

The other major building project was the building of several buildings for our University System over the state.

The university is dear to the hearts of all of the people of Georgia—the

Committee Backs Talmadge Tag Bills

Talmadge Doctrines Sound, Says Knox, Chicago Editor

Daily News Publisher, Here for Education Meeting, Raps Roosevelt's Recovery Plans.

Praising Governor Eugene Talmadge, Colonel Frank Knox, editor and publisher of the Chicago Daily News, in Atlanta to address the meeting of the twenty-fourth annual conference of the Church Boards of Education at the Baltimore hotel Wednesday night, said in an interview Wednesday afternoon that the federal government would have to "come back to the sound doctrine of the governor of Georgia, before it would be able to lick the depression."

"The thing that interests the men, women and children of the United States today is the question: When will business begin to decrease unemployment, instead of increasing it?" "There are not less than 11,000,000 unemployed in the United States today, and this total will no doubt increase to 12,000,000 before the end of the winter."

"There are approximately 5,000,000 on relief rolls. The remaining 6,000,000 are living on their own dwindling resources or being supported by relatives. It is, therefore, idle to assume that any plan for government employment of unemployed can be devised which, by the wildest stretch of imagination, could put all of the employables of the unemployed back to work."

Business Revival Only Way.
"There is only one possible way in which it can be done. That is through a revival of private business means, whether it is by planned economy like the NRA, or by made work at government expense, the more certain it becomes that these experiments will not return until two conditions are met: The stabilization of the dollar at a permanent fixed gold value, and balancing the budget in a reasonably short time."

"The further we go along the road to attempted recovery by artificial means, whether it is by planned economy like the NRA, or by made work at government expense, the more certain it becomes that these experiments will not return until two conditions are met: The stabilization of the dollar at a permanent fixed gold value, and balancing the budget in a reasonably short time."

F. D. R. Plan "Impractical."
"The president's plan for creating jobs for the three and a half million now on the relief rolls is impractical. It would take at least one year to draft the plans, obtain the land and material, build up the organization and put the three and a half million to work."

"This plan would put back to work not even half of the unemployed, and the national government could not more continue to spend $8 for every $4 it takes in, and not face ultimate fiscal disaster, than you or I could."

DRY REPEAL BILL COMES UP TODAY

Farmers Market, Crew Measure Also To Be Introduced in House.

A bill calling for state prohibition repeal and substituting for it a county option referendum plan will be introduced today in the general assembly, along with two other bills, one providing a farmers' market here and the other calling for full crews on all trains operating in Georgia.

The dry repeal measure is to be offered in the house of representatives where all revenue measures must originate. Under the terms of the bill any county which votes to have a liquor dispensary will have it, those voting to be dry will remain dry. As provided by the constitution, all revenues obtained from the act will be allocated to the common schools.

It was not announced who will sign the bill but it is expected to have a number of signatures, including those of the Chatham and Richmond county delegations.

The farmers' market, under the bill to be presented by Representative Joe Johnson, of Seminole county, will be under the direction of the market bureau of the general assembly, and will be drawn with the guidance of Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder. It will provide for a dual bureau of local production and trade and one for local goods which are transferred here. This bill is an outgrowth of the city of Atlanta's effort to eliminate the present market, which is being operated by Governor Talmadge and Commissioner Linder.

The full crew law, which has been urged by Governor Talmadge and which he called for in his inaugural address Wednesday, will be submitted by Representative Russell Twitty, of Ware county, in the senate, center of the state, where the governor first pledged himself to work for the law in his 1934 campaign.

The bill Representative Twitty said Wednesday night would add many additional railroad men to the pay rolls of the various carriers and would provide additional safety for passengers, freight and crew.

Committee Will Hear Regents' Bill Today

Senator Lamar Rucker, of Athens, chairman of the senate committee to which the Talmadge sponsored bill curtailing the powers of the board of regents of the university system has been referred, announced Wednesday his committee would take up the bill at 8 o'clock this afternoon at a meeting at which the regents are expected to appear in opposition to the bill. The meeting will be in the senate chamber at the capitol.

The terms of the bill are such that the loan and grant arrangement with the public works administration will be killed if the bill is passed.

Chairman Edwards of the house committee of the state of the republic, which is handling the regents bill in that body, announced Wednesday his group would take up the measure Monday afternoon.

WILL OF RECLUSE IS ATTACKED HERE

Z. A. Laney Claims He Is "Heir" of Miss Eliza Trice, Fire Victim.

The will of Miss Eliza Trice, 76-year-old recluse, who perished in flames which swept her Alexander street home on December 13, bequeathing an estate variously valued at from $60,000 to $75,000 to the Seventh Day Adventist church, was the target Wednesday for a legal fusillade fired in behalf of Z. A. Laney, described by his attorneys as "heir at law and next of kin."

In a petition filed and addressed to Judge Thomas H. Jeffries, Fulton county ordinary, Laney calls on H. E. Lysinger, president of the Georgia Conference Association of Seventh Day Adventists, "unduly influenced and coerced Miss Trice in executing the will, if she did execute it."

Laney, according to his attorneys, is a first cousin of the deceased woman and lives at Pell City, Ala. The petition, filed by W. G. Starnes, J. D. Tindall, C. N. Davis and J. F. Kemp, attorneys, charges that the plaintiff will be able to show that the will probated December 17 is not the will of Eliza Trice; that she never signed it, and that if she did attach her signature to the instrument she was "not of sound and disposing mind and memory when she did so."

Woman Claimed Incompetent. Miss Trice, the petition sets out, "was mentally incompetent to execute a will and was not of sufficient mental capacity to execute a will" at the time the will was purported to have been drawn.

The petition charges that members of the Georgia Conference Association of Seventh Day Adventists, "unduly influenced and coerced Miss Trice in executing the will, if she did execute it."

Two of the attesting witnesses to the will, the petition sets out, were members of the Georgia Conference Association of Seventh Day Adventists, "and have such an interest in the subject matter of the purported will as to make them ineligible under the law to attest said will."

Legality of the will was attacked on the grounds that Miss Trice bequeathed her entire estate "for charitable purposes, and the law does not permit more than one-third of a decedent's estate to be bequeathed and devised for charitable purposes."

Hearing Before Ordinary. A hearing will be had before Ordinary Jeffries at the next term of court.

The copy of the will which was found in Miss Trice's safety deposit box after her death set out in stipulated amounts bequeaths to the various departments and organizations of the Seventh Day Adventist church. It also was brought out in the will that Miss Trice had accumulated the sizeable estate through her own efforts and without aid from any of her relatives.

In referring to her kin the will set out that she had not seen them in a number of years and was not interested in them. The woman died as firemen and neighbors were making valiant efforts to break into her home to rescue her. The rescue efforts were hampered as iron bars had been installed at all windows.

Big Audience To Hear Scott Loftin Tonight

Atlanta Bar Association was forced Wednesday to reserve quarters at the Atlanta Athletic Club for its meeting tonight, when officers of the Georgia and the American Bar Association will address the Atlanta association. Frank Carter, president, said Wednesday. A large number of reservations are reported coming in from all parts of the state.

Principal speakers of the meeting will be Scott W. Loftin, of Jacksonville, Fla., president of the national organization; Graham Wright, of Rome, president of the Georgia organization, and Mr. Carter. Results of balloting among Atlanta lawyers on the proposed consolidation of the city court of Atlanta with the superior court, and on the proposed Georgia judicial council will be announced at the meeting, Mr. Carter said.

WHEN STOMACH PAINS AND GAS BOTHER YOU

You'll agree that taking doses of all sorts of stomach relievers 3 or 4 times a day is a real nuisance. So for indigestion, gas pains and stomach and bowel acidity just do this:

In your morning cup of coffee or tea take as much Kruschen Salts as will fill on a dime—it's tasteless that way. Do this every morning but don't stop when stomach distress is ended—

Keep right on with the little daily dose of Kruschen till the jar is empty because while taking it the liver, bile duct, bowels and kidneys will be helped to function naturally and you'll be overjoyed because life will be brighter—you'll feel younger—more ambitious. You are urged to try just one jar of Kruschen—6 precious salts blended into one—then if you are not joyfully satisfied—money back—a jar lasts 8 weeks—and do not forget—it's the little daily dose that does it.—(adv.)

BIRTH OF R. E. LEE TO BE CELEBRATED HERE ON SATURDAY

White House conference that adjustment of the voluntary acreage reduction program with the Bankhead act was discussed. The national quota under the Bankhead law or the allotment which may be sold tax free will be announced officially tomorrow.

Officials have said the quota would be 12,000,000 bales, including 700,000 bale certificates left over from 1934.

Cotton Acreage Cuts

Secretary Wallace said at his press conference that some consideration was being given to an acreage cut above the 25 per cent requested under the voluntary adjustment program in order to fit it more closely to the Bankhead act allotment.

However, he added, that would depend on whether sufficient funds were available to pay additional benefits for the added reduction. The AAA has told cotton growers that they—if they choose—may reduce acreage 30 per cent below normal plantings.

The administration will pay benefits for this year's crop reduction from a processing tax of 4-1/2 cents per pound on consumption in 1935. Domestic consumption for that year was estimated at 5,800,000 bales. It appeared doubtful that this would yield funds necessary to make any further cut in acreage this year.

Domestic Carryover

The administration is aiming at a domestic carryover of about 7,500,000 bales on August 1, 1935, the secretary said. The carryover on August 1, this year, is expected to be about 8,500,000 bales.

Any efforts to frame an international agreement for cotton must keep the possibility of foreign substitutes manufactured from wood pulp "continually in mind," the secretary said.

He said Germany, England and Italy are now preparing to manufacture such substitutes and it is "an inevitable development" if the process is sound.

He also said he believed that Russia and China would continue to increase their cotton production in those countries since these nations were aiming to improve the national welfare.

SHERIFF, BANKER KILLED IN ILLINOIS

men. The blistering salvoes were returned. Bundy fell dead. Seipp pitched into the dirt, wounded. The liberated desperado rejoined his comrades and their captives.

Forewarned of the outrage, Sheriff Axline and his deputies met the fugitives near Varna in Marshall county. The officers laid down a barrage. The criminals loosed a counter fusillade. Deputy Brown was struck in the right arm. A bullet hit the Maas boy's right hand.

Sheriff Killed

Running the blockade, the bandits sped north and west. Near Magnolia in Putnam county, they saw their pursuers hot on the trail and stopped. One of the felons got out and raised his hands above his head. The officials' auto halted. Sheriff Axline got out. The gangsters shot him down in cold blood.

Pushing the salesman from their machine but with young Maas holding his torn hand in the tenuous, the robbers sped to the Jacob Yaeger farm near McNabb. Two of the men took the youth into the house. The other pair, Leis and Thielens, sought safety in a near-by copse, taking shelter behind trees. They pumped their weapons as the slain Axline's party drove up.

Fifty state policemen, deputies from Putnam, La Salle and Marshall counties and officers from Peru, Peoria and La Salle hurried to the scene. The officers surrounded the desperadoes. They raked the woods and with bullets. One found a mark in Thielens. Leis, cornered, put his own pistol to his head and ended his life.

Thielens was captured. His confederates, Fred Gerner, 30, Rockford, and John Houff, 23, Chicago, who had hidden in the beleaguered house came out with Maas and surrendered.

COUNTY ARRANGES $3,480,000 LOAN

Plan To Result in Large Saving Through Cash
Purchases.

Fulton county negotiated a $3,480,000 loan for 1935 operating expenses when the county commissioners Wednesday unanimously voted approval of a proposal by the three Atlanta national banks, Trust Company of Georgia and Robinson-Humphrey Company, under which the county will go on a cash basis, which is expected to result in substantial savings.

Interest on the funds obtained under the new plan, which Atlanta banks have been perfecting during the past eight months, will be 2 per cent on tax anticipation notes securing a $1,800,000 loan and 4 per cent on county warrants which, under the new system of financing, will be discounted immediately by the banks.

Last year's rate was 2-1/2 per cent of the tax notes and 6 per cent on warrants. Last year's loan was $3,280,000, advanced by Trust Company of Georgia and Robinson-Humphrey Company.

The commission's action in ratifying the plan after Phil C. McDuffie, representing several foreign financial houses and a representative of Courts & Co., had made a final plea to be allowed to submit sealed bids and that the contract for the loan be awarded to the lowest bidder.

Constitution Change For Group Discussed

A new constitution for the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools was the subject of discussion here Wednesday when Dr. W. P. For, president of Duke University, met with representatives of 12 leading colleges and universities of the country at the Ritzmore hotel. The new constitution will be voted on at the association's annual meeting next December.

The proposed change in the constitution was presented to the association at the convention held here last December. Flexibility in the appointment of officers and other matters is given as a reason for the change. Dr. For said he and his colleagues are decidedly not in favor of the change.

PHARMACISTS SEEK CHANGE IN DRUG ACT

The Georgia Pharmaceutical Association, in placing its stamp of approval on the proposed uniform narcotic act, recommended that the state drug act be amended to prevent the sale except upon the recommendations of physicians of "barbituric acid salt," of which sleeping portions are made.

Dr. W. S. Elkins Jr., former chief state drug inspector, was voted a life membership in the association in recognition of his work while a state officer and was named secretary of the association succeeding Dr. R. C. Wilson, of Athens, who was named executive secretary.

your heart will stop beating, yet with of how the tell-tale notes began to appear in circulation five days after the ransom was paid.

The state says Bruno stole the baby
from his nursery, left from a ladder with him and killed him in the fall.
Then, it claims, he callously striped the sleeping suit from the body to use in bargaining for the ransom and buried his ghastly burden in the thicket, across the Hunterdon county line near Mount Rose, N. J.

4 Experts Testify.
The state's tedious handwriting testimony was completed at the trial's adjournment today after four more experts had called Bruno the author of all 14 notes.

Positive in their identification, they were just as sure in refuting defense insinuations that Hauptmann's handwriting was used as a disguise for somebody else.

The defense has made it plain it expects to name Isador Fisch, Haupt-mann's dead alibi man, as that somebody else.

Fisch, frail little fellow, went to Germany to die. Before he sailed Hauptmann says, he left a shoe box in which Bruno allegedly found more than $14,000 in ransom bills.

That was the carpenter's story when officers found the money hidden in his house and garage in New York city's Bronx.

Sixty witnesses remain to be heard by the jury before the state tells the judge, "We rest." Prosecuting attorneys, commenting tonight on the possibility of completion of their case by next Wednesday, shook their heads dubiously. They said another full week appeared inevitable.

Out of court, the defense claimed today to have a witness "trucked away" who will testify that Fisch and Haupt-mann's own writing was not uncommon and that Fisch used a somewhat similar hyphen, but Osborn said the hyphen was "only one of a hundred connections between Hauptmann and these ransom notes."

Defense Witness.
The witness, said Edward J. Reilly, chief of the defense staff, is Gustav Lukatis, of New York, who declared the offer was made in April or May of 1932, not long after Dr. John F. "Jafsic" Condon paid the $20,000 ransom to a man he has identified as Hauptmann.

However, the state has brought three relatives and the nurse of Fisch from Germany to explode the "Fisch myth."
The four were taken secretly to the Trenton hotel today after one of them, Pincus Fisch, was quoted in New York as saying he will testify
"only that my dead brother is guilty."

Bruno showed little interest today in the four experts, Harry E. Cassidy, of Virginia; William T. Souder, of the federal bureau of standards at Washington; Albert D. Osborn, of New York, and T. Clark Sellers, of Los Angeles.

Cross-examiners again pointed their questions toward the defense premise that the dead Fisch wrote the notes, but they got no support from the witnesses.

The soft-voiced Cassidy conceded the handwriting "in one short letter" might be forged successfully, but added in a Virginia drawl:

"Almost Impossible."
"But gee whiz, when you talk about all 14 letters, it looks like to me it would be almost an impossible task, Mr. Fisher."

"Mr. Fisher," C. Lloyd Fisher, of the defense staff—got about the same answer from the others.

Osborn, whose father, Albert S. Osborn, was a previous witness for the state, said the theory that someone copied Hauptmann's writing on the ransom notes was "so far-fetched that it is absolutely ridiculous."

At another point he declared:
"There have been lots of persons suspected that were perfectly innocent."

VICKS

As before, the defense sought to show that the hyphenated "New-York" in both the ransom note and Haupt-mann's own writing was not uncommon and that Fisch used a somewhat similar hyphen, but Osborn said the hyphen was "only one of a hundred
connections between Hauptmann and
these ransom notes."

Prompting Disbelievers.
The witness, who prepared some of the material dictated to Hauptmann when police obtained his sample writings, also said he was unable to believe that the officers deliberately prompted the prisoner to use the misspelling apparent in the ransom notes.

Souder, who is chief of the identification laboratory of the bureau of standards, said he had examined 8,000 suspected writings, including Haupt-mann's conceded and request writings, before he came to the unshakable conclusion that Hauptmann wrote the ransom notes.

Sellers, who testified for the state in the trial of William Edward Hickman, executed for the murder of Martin Luther King, Jr., said he had examined the trial of Winnie Ruth Judd, said under cross-examination that the writing in the ransom notes was "so convincing that Hauptmann might just as well have signed each and every one of them."

Sellers said his long experience had shown him writers rarely disguised their numerals.

Clinching Evidence.
"Numerals, and numerals alone, are often clinching evidence," he said, pointing out the similarity of the numerals on the ransom notes and those in the Hauptmann writings.

The afternoon proceedings were interrupted once in startling fashion when a man suddenly arose in the audience and asked for a seat where he could view the handwriting exhibits being shown the jury.

"I want to ask Mr. Reilly if I may look at the testimony that was given," the voice said.

It was Lieutenant Commander William Cameron, reported to be one of the defense handwriting experts.

"No; you must keep quiet," said
Supreme Court Justice Thomas W.
Trenchard, as everyone turned to look at the man.

"We cannot permit interruptions of that sort at all. If counsel in this case are interested in having that person where he can see what is going on, they will indicate it and a place will be furnished for him, but we cannot permit an interruption," the justice added, peering through his glasses at the battery of prosecution attorneys and then shifting his gaze to the defense table.

None of the lawyers offered to find the man a seat, and he said, "I am sorry, your honor."

Writing Disguised.
Osborn, on the stand longer than the others, said the ransom writing was disguised, and that Hauptmann had tried to disguise his hand in the first five lines of the requested writing.

He added:
"This particular piece of writing by the defendant, standing by itself (an enlarged photograph of the request writing), I think is a strong indication of guilt, because it is quite evident that the writer made a strenuous effort at disguise in the first five lines and then suddenly stopped his disguise and wrote naturally."

"When this specimen was written it was two and a half years after the ransom notes had been written. The ransom notes were disguised throughout, in my judgment, and the first part of this specimen was disguised."
"I believe the writer of this specimen had only one disguise, and the first five lines here are distinctly like the writing in many ways in the ransom notes and it shows the same hand that wrote this specimen also wrote the ransom notes."

Sellers More Positive.
Sellers, most positive in his manner of the four experts, who testified today, said the "combination of identifying similarities" in the writings he had examined "are of such a nature that I am irresistibly led to a positive conclusion in this case."

He said he had found differences in the writings, but not fundamental differences which would justify him in excusing them. The differences, he said, "are due to the natural variations of the writer and to attempted disguise."

The volume of the writing in the ransom notes, Sellers said, offered an almost insurmountable number of difficulties to anyone attempting to disguise his hand completely.

"In the first place," he explained to the jury, "the writer, to disguise his writings, must have a thorough knowledge of his peculiar handwriting characteristics, and it has been my experience that most people do not have thorough knowledge, even of their own peculiar handwriting characteristics."

Powers Limited.
A person attempting to disguise his handwriting is limited to his own natural concept of how the letters should be formed, Sellers went on.

"And I think that is exactly what happened in this case; I think that Mr. Hauptmann started out in this first letter to laboriously disguise his handwriting, and as he progressed further in that letter, and also with the other letters, he disguised his handwriting to a various amount, but many times he let down."

Although the defense made little progress in its boring cross-examination today, it won a partial victory in another court.

James M. Fawcett, who was succeeded by Reilly as the carpenter's attorney, was ordered by the appellate division of the supreme court in Brooklyn to bring to court Friday all papers bearing on the case that are in his possession.

The order was made with a view to determining whether the documents are necessary to the murder trial defense.

Reilly has sued for the papers, which Fawcett, by authority of a supreme court order, retained for the security for counsel fees and expenses.

Cassidy First Called.
Cassidy was the first called to the stand.

George K. Large, of the defense counsel opened with a motion.

"I desire to move to strike out the testimony of yesterday's last witness —the man who made baby thumbguards."

"I said that the thumbguard he examined was of mono-metal and that he was the manufacturer of it."

"I submit that the witness is not qualified. He is not an expert of any kind."

"All he knew about the quality of metal is that which he learned by wearing a ring made from it."

"Is this motion opposed," asked Justice Trenchard.

"Of course we oppose it," said Attorney General David T. Wilentz.

"The motion is denied," the justice
then ruled, and Assistant Attorney Joseph Louian began the direct examination of Cassidy.

Q. Where do you reside?
A. In Highland Park, just outside of Richmond, Va.

Q. Your profession?
A. Document examiner for the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad.

The witness said he had testified in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, West Virginia and Kentucky.

Tells of Examinations.
After his qualifications were conceded by the court, the witness quickly related how he had examined the ransom and the Hauptmann writings with a view to comparing them.

His examination, he said, convinced him that all the 14 ransom notes were written by the one person.

"The same person who wrote the request writings and the standard writings wrote those ransom notes," Cassidy declared.

Q. Who wrote those ransom notes?
A. If Mr. Hauptmann wrote the standard writings, he also wrote the ransom notes.

The Virginia appeared thoroughly at his ease.

He began explanation of his findings and enumerated errors in spelling.

"Sound" should be spelled "s-o-u-n-d" but was "s-o-n-d," he spelled.

"Anything was spelled 'a-n-y-thing' I'm inclined to attribute this to the German influence."

"All the notes," Cassidy said, "were written by the same person."

He said that in both specimens,
"our" was spelled both correctly and incorrectly.

As he read from a small chart, he made notations opposite the specimens, the authorities contrasted sharply with that of the Virginia boy who preceded him.

There was no suggestion of humor or doubt in the witness' testimony.

Crisp, Souder finished up with the first chart, giving a short discussion on each of the peculiarities and characteristics which led him to link Hauptmann to the ransom note writer.

Hauptmann looked dully at the witness. Another chart was produced.
Copies were passed among the jurors.

"This is prepared like the preceding chart," he explained. "m-o-n-y."
"h-t-e" and those that had been reviewed previously by other experts.

Q. That completes the charts, doctor?

A. Yes.

"Take the witness," said Lanigan.

Recess Taken.
Frederick A. Pope started to cross-examine, but the jury wished to retire and a five-minute recess was called at 11:05 a. m.

At 11:13 the jury filed back and court was called to order.

State attorneys said probably two more handwriting experts would be called after Souder.

Souder resumed the stand, and Pope took up cross-examination.

Q. You were referring to your qualifications. Do you want us to understand that you took any special course in handwriting?

A. No, but I wish to explain.

Q. Where did you get your instruction?
A. At Northwestern University.

Q. Was that a special course in handwriting?

A. That was a special short course in disputed documents.

Q. In making the examination of the so-called ransom notes, the standard writing and the request writing, you found various discrepancies?

A. I found no discrepancies that were not overcome by positive identification.

Pope objected that the answer was not responsive.

"I think he answered your question," said Justice Trenchard, "I don't think I will strike it out."

Pope again asked how he found any discrepancy in the letters of the ransom writing.

Dr. Souder defined discrepancy as "absolute and positive differences which cannot be reconciled."

"I found none," he declared with conviction.

Pope Goes Over Charts.
Methodically Pope went over the government expert's charts, pointing out letters and repeatedly urging the witness to admit there was a "marked difference" between some of the characters.

Souder, who refused to be hurried in his answers, said some differences were apparent, but added the differences were not marked because if they were, the letters would be irreconcilable, which was not the case in his opinion.

Pope traced the "f's" the "d's," the "y's," and at the end of each tracing,
the attorney inquired:

Q. Now these are dissimilar, are they not?

A. There is a difference.

Q. Why didn't you use the word
"please" out of the request writings to compare with the word in the ransom note?

A. I didn't think it necessary.

Q. Wasn't it because it was different in the request writings?

A. I don't think so.

Pope brought out that the characters on the expert's chart were pictures of the letters and that for frequently other forms of the same letter appearing in both writings were passed over in the search for a questioning form.

He made much of this in his questioning.

Dr. Souder, however, took occasion again to state: "There was no discrepancy which indicated a different writer in all these documents."

Lanigan asked only two questions on redirect, and Souder was then excused.

Albert D. Osborn, of New York and Montclair, was the next handwriting expert to take the stand.

He is the son of Albert S. Osborn, first of the battery of experts to testify.

Under questioning by Lanigan Osborn said he had testified "in 15 states and in many courts, criminal and otherwise."

Q. Based upon your examination of the genuine writing of Hauptmann, the request writing of Hauptmann, and the ransom writings, have you reached a conclusion?

A. I have.

Q. Are you prepared to state it?
A. I am.

Q. Do so.

A. In my judgment, based upon this state's evidence, Bruno Richard Hauptmann wrote all the ransom
notes.

Produces Photograph.
The expert then produced a large photograph showing part of the label from the package in which the sleeping suit was sent to the Lindberghs.

Osborn directed his attention to a second address on the wrapper, and he said, "the writer let down. He was off his guard."

As a result he said the similarity of the address writing to Hauptmann's writing was in his opinion "obvious."

He called significant the "n" that practically stands on one "foot" in the word "New York," as it appeared on the wrapper.

A large chart of the request writings made by Hauptmann after his arrest was placed before the court.

Osborn said the five lines of the request writing were very similar to the script of the ransom notes.

These lines were disguised, the expert said, and then pointed out that abruptly the writing changed and Hauptmann reverted to his normal style.

Osborn spoke of the specimen as an indication of the writer's "guilt," and expressed his belief that the ransom notes and parts of the Hauptmann request writing were disguised.

Osborn was still on direct examination when court took its noon recess.
Court convened at 1:41.

Fisher, who resumed the examination, cross-examined.

Fisher sought to break down Osborn's statement he had never seen
"New York" as it appeared on the number of letters and postcards bearing the city's name with a connecting hyphen.

One of the exhibits Fisher presented to the expert was one which bore a hyphen between the words Bronx and New York. The card was shown to one of the experts yesterday.

The defense attorney asked him to read the return address.

"I. Fisch, Leipzig, Germany," was the reply.

The defense obviously was returning to its effort to establish that Isador Fisch may have penned the ransom notes.

After Fisher had finished his parade of exhibits, he asked Osborn if previous expert testimony that a hyphenated "New York" was at all usual characteristic might not be in error.

"That is only one of a hundred connections between Hauptmann and the ransom writing," was the impatient answer.

Laughter Sweeps Courtroom.
Laughter swept the courtroom without restraint at two points in the examination.

In answer to one of Fisher's questions, the expert declared "hundreds of innocent people were examined and tested, but finally (referring to Hauptmann) they got the right man."

Fisher sought to bring out the expert's fallibility.

"I don't win every case I've been in," young Osborn admitted, "neither do you."

Again there was laughter and Trenchard renewed his threat to have the court cleared.

Some Figures Dissimilar.
Fisher next brought out that certain figures in the ransom notes did not bear resemblance to others in request writing from Hauptmann.

Osborn qualified his answer with:
"In that particular case, yes." He asserted later that "generally" there was resemblance.

Osborn referred to his chart showing the sleeping suit package and the two addresses it bore.

Fisher asked for references to the script signature were based on the fact he assumed that Dr. John F.
Condon, the addressee, had testified both addresses were on the package when received.

"I'm not assuming anything," Osborn replied.

Fisher then turned to the question of the best possible topic for a request writing and asked if Osborn considered the paragraphs he prepared for dictation a good subject matter for a request writing.

The expert said he did.

Fisher next questioned the value of obtaining handwriting specimens sentences in specimens of handwriting from a subject.

Osborn said if the sentences were coherent in themselves the specimens were good.

Fisher asked if the man who obtained the requested statements from Hauptmann might have dictated the misspelling of "not" as "note."

Osborne said he could not tell.

Q. Do you think a man who can spell "hazardous" as "circumstances" would misspell "not"?

A. Yes. He didn't look up the spelling of simple words.

"I think he had a German-English dictionary," Osborn said.

The expert said the ransom writer would not use a word that was "hazardous" in the German part of the dictionary, and then set down
the English equivalent.

Osborn's explanation was maintained as Fisher continued his hammering questions.

He never raised his voice and frequently corrected the statements of facts as set forth by the defense attorney in his queries.

Fisher said the witness believed it would be possible for an imitator successfully to ape the Hauptmann writing throughout the ransom
notes.

"The probability is so far-fetched that it is ridiculous," was the answer.

Disguise, said Osborn, was "the worst way" to attempt an imitation of a man's handwriting.

Fisher asked if a forger had written the ransom notes would the writing resemble Hauptmann's.

Osborn replied in the negative.

Sellers Takes Stand.

Osborn was excused at 2:43 and Clark Sellers was sworn as a witness.

Sellers said he was an examiner and photographer of questioned documents and that he lived in Los Angeles.

Sellers said he testified in two kidnapping cases and also identified Winnie Ruth Judd as the writer of a confession letter in her trial for murder of two women. He said he testified in the Rudolph Valentino estate case, the Paul Berne (ex-husband of Jean Harlow) death case, and the Mae West jewel robbery case.

Lanigan began quizzing him concerning his examination of the ransom notes and the conceded and requested Hauptmann writings.

The expert said he had examined them all.

"I am convinced," Sellers said, after taking the ransom notes from Lanigan, "that all of these were written by the same person."

Next Lanigan asked if the comparative material (Hauptmann's writing) was sufficient to form an opinion.

"Yes, ample," said Sellers.

"I am convinced absolutely," said the California expert that the person who wrote these conceded and requested writings is the same writer who wrote each one of the ransom notes.

"If Mr. Bruno Richard Hauptmann wrote these conceded and requested writings, then he must have been the writer of the ransom notes."

Illustrates Reasons.

Lanigan then asked him to illustrate the reasons for his conclusion. More large charts were brought out.

The similarities, Sellers said, were such that he was "drawn" to his conclusion.

The Pacific coast expert said no matter how careful the disguise old handwriting habits make themselves manifest.

"The stumbling block" in attempting to disguise his handwriting is the inability to keep his own handwriting from creeping in."

"I think," said the witness slowly and deliberately, "that Mr. Hauptmann started out laboriously to disguise his handwriting."

"As he progressed further in the letters, he still tried to maintain that disguise, but at various times he let down."

"There is no doubt he wrote the ransom notes."

The court recessed for five minutes at 3:17.

Sellers was still to be cross-examined when the recess was called, but the state prepared to follow his testimony with evidence of the finding of the baby's body, the next phase in the chronological development of the case.

Compare Letters and Words.

Court resumed at 3:30 and Sellers continued his direct testimony, showing his comparisons of letters and words.

The California photographer cited numerous individual characters and peculiarities which he considered significant in connecting Hauptmann with the pen of the ransom notes.

He said his experience with anonymous, disguised writing was that the writer invariably failed to disguise his numerals.

"Numerals and numerals alone," he declared, "are often clinching evidence in connecting Hauptmann with the close similarity of the numerals of the ransom notes with the Hauptmann writings."

The writing was so convincing," he said, "that I am convinced absolutely."

Next Lanigan asked if the comparative material (Hauptmann's writing) was sufficient to form an opinion.

"Yes, ample," said Sellers.

"I am convinced absolutely," said the California expert that the person who wrote these conceded and requested writings is the same writer who wrote each one of the ransom notes.

ment to make international justice practicable and serviceable is not subject to partisan considerations."

The executive pointed out both republican and democratic platforms for years have urged a "court of justice to which nations might voluntarily bring their disputes for judicial decision," and added:

"The sovereignty of the United States will be in no way diminished or jeopardized by such action. At this period in international relationships, when every act is of moment to the future of world peace, the United States has an opportunity once more to throw its weight into the scale in favor of peace."

Democratic leaders felt the message would swing several doubtful votes for ratification. They have never had any doubt of ratification, however, if a final vote were reached.

Johnson disagreed strenuously that the move would be in the interest of peace. He contended America would just be involving itself in foreign policy in violation of her traditional policy of isolation and that ultimate membership in the league would result as surely as night follows day.

Pope Accused.

He asserted an effort was now afoot by Senator Pope, democrat, Indiana, to get the United States into the league and said he had heard that state department was assisting Pope in writing his resolution.

Pope denied this, saying he had never consulted the state department on the subject.

Calling attention to the fact that the 21st birthday of his eldest grandson, the day was just as significant to him as it was to Sheppard, democrat, Texas, who spoke for a return of prohibition in his usual address, Johnson fairly shouted:

"I don't want any son or grandson of mine sent to work in China in a China and Japan."

"Why take the risk? Why join for the sake of peace, when there is no peace? I have never yet heard of a creditor submitting his questions to the judgment of his debtors. Now is the most unpropitious time to join the League Court."

"Do we enter this sacrosanct tribunal for the preservation of peace?" he asked with sarcasm, and then swung downward the tightly-clasped fingers he uses for emphasis.

"Not so, Not so!"

"Not so, Not so," he exclaimed. "Do we enter it for the determination of any American question? Not so, Not so. Do we enter it for determination of questions involving America with any other country. Not so, Not so."

"Then why do we enter it? Not for America, our beloved republic, but to meddle and muddle in European affairs and in a court that is foreign to our people and the genesis of our institutions."

Arguing America had more pressing domestic problems to settle, he asked:

"Don't you think we can deal with our own (unemployed) for while we forget Europe's difficulties and wars? There's work enough for all of us."

Text of Message.

The text of the president's message: "To the Senate:

"A movement to make international justice practicable and serviceable is not subject to partisan considerations. For years, republican and democratic administrations and party platforms alike have advocated a court of justice to which nations might voluntarily bring their disputes for judicial decisions."

"To give concrete realization to this obviously sound and thoroughly American policy, I hope that at an early date the senate will advise and consent to the advice by the United States to the protocol of signature of the statute of the permanent court of international justice dated September 14, 1929, and the protocol for the accession of the United States of America to the protocol of signature of the statute of the permanent court of international justice, dated September 14, 1929, all of which were submitted to the senate December 10, 1930."

"I urge that the senate's consent be given in such form as not to defeat or to delay the objective reference."

"The sovereignty of the United States will be in no way diminished or jeopardized by such action."

"At this period in international relationships, when every act is of moment to the future of world peace, the United States has an opportunity once more to throw its weight into the scale in favor of peace."

WOOTEN NAMED HEAD OF AUDUBON SOCIETY

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Jan. 16. Stewart Wooten, Milledgeville councilman, was installed Monday as president of the Audubon Club of Milledgeville. Wooten was the author of the recently adopted resolution of the city council to make Milledgeville an official bird sanctuary. Largely through his efforts the speed signs at the city limits were removed and in their places were put signs reading, "Milledgeville a Bird Sanctuary."

Other officers of the bird club who were installed are Mrs. Sam Anderson, vice president; Miss Austell Adams, secretary, and Miss Florida Moye, treasurer.

where, and we can get it there and at the same time put bootleggers out of business."

"If you open that store, I'll raid it," Edwin F. Johnson, regarded as the leader of the majority faction of the commission and chairman of the police committee of the county, said.

"As long as the law remains on the books we propose to enforce it in Fulton county even if city police officers do not," Johnson said later in explaining his position. "I would vote for repeal any time, but I am not ready to defy the law, and we do not want the city to go into the bootlegging business. It will not as long as I am connected with the county police department."

Mayor Hits Pay Hikes.

The mayor rapped the commission for increasing the county pay roll $140,000, saying that he as "an humble taxpayer and as a citizen of Atlanta and Fulton county I do not approve of it; and I want to say that the public generally does not approve of it."

Key and Johnson differed over the matter when Johnson assumed the floor to answer Key.

It appeared from the meeting Wednesday afternoon that the schism between county and city employees over large differences in pay schedules will be accentuated by failure of the commission to make any additional allocation for hospital operation as Key asked in order to reduce the pay cuts of Atlanta municipal employees.

Fulton schedules have been relatively larger for many years, it was pointed out.

Although all members of the commission present expressed sympathy with the attempt to procure funds to prevent large city salary cuts, they told Key that the commission has not funds it can divert for the purpose.

Ragsdale, Almond Absent.

Commissioners J. A. Ragsdale and Ed L. Almond did not attend the meeting because of illness.

Key asked the commission to set up at least half the cost of operation and maintenance of Grady hospital, Battle Hill sanitarium and two other smaller hospitals, operated by the city. He sought a minimum of $335,000, which they should discharge jointly," Key said in opening his address.

"I realize that the city and county have a common burden and a common duty which they should discharge jointly," Key said in opening his address.

"It now appears that salaries of city employees who were not overpaid before cuts became mandatory, will have to be cut about 18 per cent to balance the budget, and those making $100 or less a month must be cut at least 5 per cent to absorb the deficit in 1935 finances."

"The recent increase to county employees should not have been made. The public will not support you. As an humble taxpayer and citizen, I do not think this is the time to have made them. As a public official I am here to say it should not have been done."

Says Fulton Should Help.

"Fulton county in all cases should bear all the hospital expense now borne by Atlanta. Nearly one-third of the white babies born here are born at Grady, and 80 per cent of the negroes are born there. For the last four months ambulances have answered an average of one call every 10.4 minutes at Grady."

"I am sure we are not here to drive a sharp bargain with you or with the county board. Atlanta is now in a position where it cannot do justice to its employees."

"I would not quarrel with you if you raised the salary of Uncle Henry Wood (clerk of the commission, who was sitting at the commission table). If I were he, I would not accept it. The council wanted to raise my pay $1,500 when I was elected mayor four years ago and the recommendation had been passed unanimously. I stopped it. I told them I would not accept it with city finances in the condition they are in."

"These $9,000-a-year employees should not be asking for a raise now. Even if tendered to them, they should not accept it. I'd walk right up and refuse it."

"I see where the legislature is proposing to reduce city and county taxes. There is no telling where we will land. Those people don't know what they are talking about. If they impoverish the service here, they will do more injury to Atlanta and Fulton county properties than if they collected the taxes now imposed against them."

"Come along and help us. We need it now."

Johnson Praises Key.

Johnson opened his address with a tribute to Key and his services to Atlanta and Fulton county citizens.

"I did all I could in the last election to re-elect Jim Key," Johnson said. "I supported him in the primary. His opinion regarding the conduct of the county officials is as good as anyone else's, but I have no apology to make about the raises we authorized. Some employees of the county were decreased as much as 52 per cent from peak years. There are 258 employees in Fulton county. Even with the increase, salaries are reduced about 25 per cent."

"The county's finances are in good shape and a tribute has been paid to retiring members of the old board and those who remain for their fine work. The Atlanta Clearing House Association believes the finances of the county are in good shape."

"I am in accord with our great Governor Eugene Talmadge in his program of economy."

County Turns Down Mayor Key's Plea for Funds

Mayor James L. Key and three of the five members of the Fulton county commission Wednesday afternoon discussed governmental problems, but Key was unsuccessful in his efforts to obtain a fund of $335,000 from the commission for hospital operation for 1935. Those shown in the above picture, left to right, are Key, Edwin F. Johnson, regarded as the majority leader of the commission; Dr. C. R. Adams, chairman of the commission; and George F. Longino, minority leader and chairman of the commission's finance committee. Staff photo by George Cornett.

all its services for the benefit of Atlanta and Atlanta. About 98 per cent of the criminal business of the county originates in Atlanta, and 97 done, the trading public could not per cent of the civil business originate Atlanta stores with the facility they now enjoy. I think there should be a gradual merger of city and county services. There is a real human appeal in hospitals. We have so much money and we have reduced our expenses to meet our limited finances.

"We allocated $70,000 last year to Grady hospital and also made an appropriation to Battle Hill. I am in accord with Commissioner Longino that if we had the money, I'd be ready to help. We haven't, and we can do nothing."

"I want to disagree with Mayor Key in saying the increases voted last week should not have been made. It was right to do it. It was fair, and I supported them."

Budget Out of Balance.

Longino told the mayor that the county budget is now out of balance, but "if we had the money I'd vote to write you a check for the amount you want right now."

"I have been on this board for four years," Longino said. "I have been co-operating with the city. There has been a close feeling of harmony between the city and county. Even if the salary increases had not been voted, we would not have had any surplus."

"County pay rolls are still about 25 per cent under what they were four years ago. Maybe the county should operate Grady, and I would be willing to do so, if a referendum were held and the people expressed a desire to see the institution operated by the county."

"If we had the money, I'd write a check right now for all you are asking."

Adams Expresses Sympathy.

Dr. Charles Ross Adams, chairman of the commission, expressed sympathy with Grady hospital and with Key for the city's problems, but also said he saw no way for the county to help.

"I have been close to Grady and my profession would naturally make me feel kindly to the institution," he said. "I wish we could do what you are asking."

J. Frank Beck, city councilman, appeared before the commission with a plea for additional appropriations for Battle Hill sanitarium and asked that the county consider purchasing a 13-acre tract opposite the present site at a cost of $4,000 for the erection of a proposed $100,000 building for children to be constructed with federal aid. He was told that due consideration would be given to both matters.

ATLANTA'S THEATERS

'Bengal Lancer' Opens
At Paramount Today
A picture which combines spectacle, action, and the poignance of human drama, "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer," begins its run at the Paramount today.

There have been many number of screen spectacles based on the lives and adventures of fighting men, but never one of the caliber of "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer." Over four years in the making, it employed more than 4,000 actors in scenes shot in the mountain fastnesses of India and in five separate locations in California.

Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone, Richard Cromwell, and Sir Guy Standing head the cast as officers of the colorful regiment. The drama arises from the conflict between Sir Guy Standing who plays a cruel, hard-shelled colonel, and his subordinate officers.

Cooper and Tone adopt Cromwell, the colonel's impulsive and idealistic son, as a special charge. When he becomes involved with a Russian girl, and is carried off by a neighboring chieftain, Cooper and Tone follow, although they face certain destruction, to rescue the girl and to check the revolt which will follow.

At this crucial moment Cooper hits upon the idea of first convincing the boy to secrecy on his own shameful betrayal, goes out to blow the fort to smithereens and save the girl.

The cast, which features only one girl, Kathleen Burke, includes such Hollywood favorites as Monte Blue, C. Aubrey Smith, Douglas Dumbrille, Makin Tamirol, and Colin Tapley.

'Broadway Bill' Plays
Fourth Rialto Week
"Broadway Bill," setting new box office records for the Rialto theater, enters today on the fourth consecutive week of its first-run Atlanta showing at that theater.

It seems as though Director Frank Capra is the one Hollywood wielder of the megaphone who knows the exact recipe for a picture that will be a success. To critics—notably Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins—who have said the plan "raised false hopes," Capra's record is a resounding success.

The president has raised a hell of a lot of false hopes over his New Deal program, it seems to me.

Both expressed confidence the plan would pass. Townsend said congressmen would not vote for the bill "if they want to come back after future elections." Observers, however, saw little chance of success for the bill.

Navy Plane Reaches Panama Goal Safely

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—(AP)—Held back by unfavorable winds, the giant navy biplane XP2H-1 landed at Coco Solo, Canal Zone, at 4:50 p. m. (eastern standard time) today, after a 2,000-mile non-stop flight from Norfolk, Va.

Exactly 25 hours had elapsed from the take-off by Lieutenant J. S. Thach, commander and pilot, bringing the giant ship to an easy landing in the water off the air base near Cristobal, Panama. The report sent back to the navy department here was that head winds had prevented holding the normal speed of 90 miles an hour.

With Lieutenant Thach were Lieutenant C. E. Giese, co-pilot, and six enlisted men.

Officials, saying this was the first single flight of its kind undertaken, recalled that a squadron of six planes last summer made a non-stop from Norfolk to Coco Solo without incident.

DISPOSSESSED NEGRO WOUNDED BY OFFICER

A negro, dispossessed from his home at 306 Fort street, N. E., Wednesday morning, was in a serious condition at Grady hospital Wednesday night, a bullet wound in his chest, received, according to police reports, when he took shot at Superintendent Patrolman G. H. Williams, who was detailed to guard the household goods, and who returned the fire.

Patrolman Williams was sitting on the steps of the house when the negro, Gordon Harris, is said to have driven up in an automobile and fired once at Williams, who jumped inside the doorway and fired back, the bullet striking Harris in the stomach.

DRILL TO LEGALIZE BEER GIVEN HOUSE

Creation of Old Age Pension Law Provided in Another.

With newly introduced measures, including one providing legalization of beer and another for enactment of old age pensions, the general assembly continued its unprecedented flood of new bills, the house getting 54 new measures, running its total to 145, and the senate getting 47, running its total to 47.

The beer bill was offered by Representative Culppeper, of Fayette county, the chairman of the house committee on appropriations; Representative Lindsay, of DeKalb county, and Representative Harris, of Richmond county. The old age pension plan was submitted by Representative Grayson, of the Chatham delegation.

The house voted Wednesday to adjourn for four days at the end of the organization meeting, which will be concluded next Wednesday. The resolution must be approved by the senate before the adjournment is taken. Under terms of the resolution the regular session, which follows the organization meeting, would not be started until January 28, a week from Monday, in order to give members time to go home and straighten out business matters in preparation for their long absence.

Under the terms of the Culppeper-Lindsay-Harris bill legalization would be voted at the age of $500, while most manufacturers and wholesalers and branch manufacturers and wholesalers. As provided in the act would go to the common schools. The measure was referred to the temperance committee which is headed by Representative Williams, of Coweta county.

Townsend Pension Bill Is Given to Congress
WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—(UP)—The Townsend plan reached congress today, with its promise of $200 a month for all over 60. Representative John Steven McGroarty, democrat of California, dropped it in a day ahead of President Roosevelt's long-range program for economic security, due before that committee.

Dr. Francis E. Townsend, the 68-year-old country doctor who originated the plan, was present for the event and joined with McGroarty in a press conference to critics—notably Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins—who have said the plan "raised false hopes," McGroarty's record is a resounding success.

The president has raised a hell of a lot of false hopes over his New Deal program, it seems to me.

Both expressed confidence the plan would pass. Townsend said congressmen would not vote for the bill "if they want to come back after future elections." Observers, however, saw little chance of success for the bill.

FOUR ATLANTANS WIN IN NATIONAL CONTESTS

Mrs. Claribel Rogers Given $100 Prize in Gold Medal Competition.

Lists of winners in the $10,000 Limerick contest of Gold Medal flour and the Wheaties three-letter word radio contest, announced Wednesday, include the names of four Atlanta residents.

In the Gold Medal limerick contest, which closed October 31, Mrs. Claribel M. Rogers, of 1016 Highland view, N. E., was awarded fifth prize of $100, while smaller prizes went to Mrs. Helen Pickett, of 180 Fifth street, N. W., and Miss Georgia Pruitt, of 220 Mitchell street, S. W. The first prize of $1,500 was won by Margaret Eisenhower, of Reading, Pa.

The Wheaties contest, which closed December 16, required the contestants to submit three-letter words from the sentence "Wheaties Give Me as Much Body Heat as Any Cooked Cereals." Miss Frances Tumlin, of 685 North Decatur road, N. E., was listed among the 50 leaders and was awarded a Magic Dial Stewart-Warner radio.

Inasmuch as grocers from whom the winners purchased their Wheaties likewise were rewarded, H. B. Hamlin, of the Rogers store at 1210 Oxford road, N. E., received $50 in cash, due to the fact that Miss Tumlin is a customer at his store.

Willhoit Invites I. C. C. To Hold Hearing Here

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—(AP)—Jud Willhoit, chairman of the Georgia public service commission, today invited the interstate commerce commission to hold a regional hearing in Atlanta in connection with its inquiry into railroad passenger fares.

The south, said Willhoit, "is the only section with reduced passenger fares and no Pullman surcharge, and to get a clear picture the interstate commerce commission should hold hearings in Atlanta."

Willhoit attended the opening of the passenger rate investigation here and conferred with Senator Russell, democrat of Georgia, relative to a resolution the latter will introduce to put rail freight rates on a mileage basis with a view to removing state discrimination against the south.

Inaugural Reception Attended By Several Hundred Georgians

By Sally Forth.

THE gracious "First Lady of Georgia" acted for the second time the important role of hostess at the inaugural reception held Wednesday afternoon at the handsome gray stone mansion situated in Ansley Park on a high terrace commanding an excellent view of the city. Wearing a striking Vionnet model fashioned of ice-green satin, Mrs. Talmadge presented a charming figure as she and her distinguished husband extended a cordial welcome and genuine hospitality to the hundreds of Georgians who called at the mansion to greet Georgia's chief executive and his family. Trimming the beautiful gown worn by Mrs. Talmadge were rhinestone clips caught to the soft becoming cowl neckline of the bodice. A shoulder bouquet of deep purple orchids completed her attractive costume which served to emphasize the dignity and charm of the state's First Lady.

The spacious lower floor, with its handsome furnishings and colorful decorations, provided a brilliant setting for the beautiful costumes worn by the ladies and the bright military uniforms worn by members of the governor's staff, who assisted in receiving the countless number of guests who were formally introduced to Governor and Mrs. Talmadge by General Lindley Camp, adjutant general of the state, and Naval Aide Jesse Draper. Receiving with the Chief Executive and Mrs. Talmadge were C. D. Redwine, president of the state senate, and E. D. Rivers, speaker of the house, and Mrs. Rivers.

In the state dining room, where coffee and tea were served from the handsome silver service presented Governor and Mrs. Talmadge by members of the former's staff, a color motif of red and white was used in the decorations, consisting of red roses and white narcissi. The beautifully appointed table was graced in the center by an exquisite silver epergne filled with these lovely flowers. Antique silver candelabra holding gleaming red tapers were arranged at either end of the table. Presiding over the tea and coffee services were Mesdames E. D. Graham, Max L. McRae, Lucy Cameron and W. S. Mann, of McRae; W. B. Hutchinson, of Albany; Mesdames Hugh Howell, Zack Cravey and Miss Lillian Jones, of Atlanta. Assisting in entertaining were Mesdames Meyer Regenstein, Lindley Camp, Hilton Tyus, of Carrollton; Horace Clark and Sallie Adams, and John A. Peterson, of Atlanta.

In the solarium, where punch was served by Mrs. Charles Smyly, of Eastman, and Miss Margaret Talmadge, daughters of Governor and Mrs. Talmadge, a profusion of tropical foliage plants prevailed in the decorations. Assisting the two lovely daughters of the Talmadge household in serving punch were several classmates at Washington Seminary of Miss Talmadge, including Misses Laura Stautner, Grace Archer, Frances Butters and Lillian White.

Mrs. T. R. Gaines, of Anderson, S. C.; Mrs. Ralph Lee, of Millen, Ga.; Mrs. Frank Browder, and Miss Carolyn Clark assisted in the entertainment of the several hundred guests.

NOTED for her individuality and penchant in giving beautiful parties, Mrs. Granger Hansell will score again Friday when she entertains at tea at her lovely home on Ponce de Leon avenue, complementing the group of distinguished visitors here for the conference of the Association of American Colleges. Mrs. Hansell, the former Sara Belle Broadnax, will transform the entire lower floor of her home into a bower of spring loveliness—a June in January effect—the delicate colors of the flowers blending in harmonious accord with the handsome gowns which the hostess and the honorees will wear. An open fire with burning logs will lend a cheery and cozy atmosphere in the living room, which will present gold green and dusty rose pink in decorative effect. Trailing yellow jasmine and delicate sprays of forsythia will hang in graceful garland effect from the low imported French mantel of green and topaz marble. Downstate 'Senator' Cuts Swath Until Suite Is Exchanged for Cell

The senator from downstate has been cutting a wide swath in Atlanta for the last week. He has enjoyed occupying the finest suite at the Hotel Wincoff and has been supplied a chauffeur by A. L. Belle late. There has been a steady stream of manicurists and chiropodists going to the senator's suite and the bellboys at the hotel Wednesday night were rubbing hips sore from bowing while in the presence of the august character.

The senator registered in at the hotel several days before the general assembly convened. The finest suite in the hotel was his for the night. He was not too good for him, he avowed as he fingered the heavy gold watch chain that swung across his ample expanse of waistcoat, or thumped his heavy walking stick on the tiled lobby. "Boy! Show the senator the best we have!"

Al Belle also contributed the best driver of a Black & White cab to chauffeur the senator in his private automobile, which, he explained, he was not accustomed to driving in the city.

When the senator would suddenly become short of cash, as sometimes happened even to a senator, his checks were eagerly cashed at the hotel, the Belle garage, or at a restaurant where the senator occasionally went to dine.

The senator was preparing to leave the city. He wanted to go home downstate for the week-end, he told L. O. Mosley, manager of the hotel. But, while the senator and his chauffeur were making preparations for the week-end trip, a check which the senator had signed and cashed at the hotel was returned marked "no account" or "insufficient funds" and the senator felt very bad about such an occurrence.

Mr. Mosley also felt very bad about it, as did Mr. Belle late, who was notified by his cashier that "the senator's checks are bouncing." "Somebody told me I looked like a senator and I thought I might as well live up to appearances," the senator is quoted as saying when confronted with the check which had been returned by the banks.

The senator changed his living quarters Wednesday from the Wincoff to a room in the Belle late, where he was held on "suspicion."

"I wonder," said A. L. Belle late to L. O. Mosley, "who is the biggest fool, you or the senator?"

And then it suddenly occurred to both of them that there was no senator in the present legislature from the county which the senator said he represented.

The sorrows of life are inevitably sobering. Wounds on the heart always leave a scar. A new love is never like the first. And a new job is never like the first. Life may be less gay and joyous to one who has loved and lost but it is also fuller and richer because of the experiences that have been crowded into it.

Dear Miss Chatfield: I live on a farm and my family is poor. I work hard day in and day out while my brother does nothing to help. He runs around with a fast gang and then comes home and abuses me. I am engaged to a young man who is honest, hard-working and a fine character. My brother says if I marry him he will kill him. What can I do to change my brother? I am really frightened about the threat.

FARM GIRL.

Answer: The chances are that your brother's threats amount to nothing more than hokum, and you should allow him to interfere with your engagement or your marriage. Go along with your plans doing all you can to protect the innocent. If your brother is a man of any man who is being opposed by his girl's family is to show fight and give them as good as they send. But there is a better way, for as long as you live you will be thrown together, you and your husband and your family. The soft answer will turn away wrath. Kindness begets kindness. Silence under provocation nets one more than quarreling.

If all efforts fail there is still left resort to the court. A man who threatens another's life can be brought before the judge and made to stand trial. If he is found guilty he must deposit a large sum of money. If he cannot furnish the cash for the bond he is sent to jail or to the penitentiary. Naturally, the woman is entitled to bring such action against her own brother whom she loves. But if he continues to threaten the man to whom she is engaged and expects to be married to, there is nothing left for her to do but arrange matters so all will be safe from her brother's insane desire to commit murder.

Atlantans To Attend Y.W.C.A. Directors' Meeting in Richmond

Mrs. Frank J. Henry and Miss Ethel Moore, of the Y. W. C. A. board of directors, will attend the meeting of national leaders held at the Richmond, Va. Y. W. C. A., January 17-18. Miss Moore will remain for a meeting of the foreign divisions held Friday afternoon and Saturday, when the world fellowship program of the Y. W. C. A. will be discussed.

At the last national convention of the Y. W. C. A. held in Philadelphia, Mrs. Henry, chairman of the local Girl Reserves committee, was elected a member of the national Girl Reserves division and will be the only person invited to the Richmond conference. She is an authority on work with younger girls in the south. Because of her wide experience with Girl Reserves and her knowledge of general conditions affecting young girls, she will contribute valuable ideas and suggestions to the discussions.

Miss Moore, leader in the business girls' department, is southern member of the National Business and Professional Council and with other leaders at Richmond, will discuss the various aspects of the national program from the southern viewpoint. These regional conferences are a result of the need expressed at national convention for smaller group meetings and will evaluate convention actions in various sections of the country.

George L. Goode, chairman American Federation of Labor for the south region, will lead a public opinion program of the Business and Professional League Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock, discussing problems faced by labor and citing the Roosevelt situation as one example. At 8:30 o'clock Mrs. Carlton Binn will discuss the child labor amendment, outlining the important phases which will be discussed before the legislature now in session. Eugene Tarber, soloist of the Druid Hills Methodist church, will be featured on the musical program.

Friendly Counsel

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondents are invited. Your name need be in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

Dear Miss Chatfield: My whole youth has been sacrificed to the care of an invalid mother. She died when I was 30 and since that time I haven't been able to get myself together. I was engaged to a young man and we were planning to be married when his work took him away from me to leave home. So I broke the engagement and in five years he was married. There was nothing else for me to do but to get on with my life. I have had a double loss. I can't get up any enthusiasm or feel any interest in anybody. Won't you help me to get a grip on myself?

HETER.

Answer: The long hard strain of nursing an invalid mother for years is a sad enough experience for the sterile state of mind in which you find yourself. Added to this the grief over your loss and the memory of your great renunciation, and I have had as much heartache and disappointment as your spirit can absorb. But there are bright days ahead if you will only try to get on with your life. At 30 a woman still has the resiliency of youth, the substantial qualities of maturity and the wisdom and sympathy of experience with suffering and sorrow, with death and with hope that springs eternal in a woman's breast.

Give yourself time to recuperate and then set out to find a beau. The first step is to get on with your life. You want one. The second is to make the most of your looks and your physical attractiveness. Men find women with their eyes give themselves something to think about by reading and associating with interesting people. Burnish up your mind, get some new ideas and a job if possible. All of these things will brighten your outlook and give you outlet and prepare you to find your prince charming.

When you have found him, remember that no man can make a happy home for himself alone. He must be a man who can give you happiness. Nine-tenths of our happiness we must create ourselves. Not even a good husband can hand it to us on a silver platter.

The sorrows of life are inevitably sobering. Wounds on the heart always leave a scar. A new love is never like the first. And a new job is never like the first. Life may be less gay and joyous to one who has loved and lost but it is also fuller and richer because of the experiences that have been crowded into it.

Georgia's FIELDS and STREAMS

BLACK BASS.

Of vital interest to Georgia fishermen is the summary of black bass legislation compiled some time ago by Talbot Denmead, of the United States bureau of fisheries. Mr. Denmead has been fighting a long time for the protection of the black bass and one of his major objectives has been the removal of this noble fish from the fishermen's albatross. As a matter of fact, that phrase has a strangely familiar ring that makes me think I read it in one of his articles. Yes, I am sure I did, since fishermen are not a word that springs to mind when I want to buy a fish.

I have never yet bought a black bass over the counter. I have caught a few, in a very few, but I feel that what I have to say about Mr. Denmead's proposed laws is impartial. Bass are fish that are the epitome of all the fishermen considers desirable. I do not believe that they rank as food with some of the ocean fishes such as flounder and pompano. Then, many states are going to a great deal of expense to value black bass for the benefit of the sports fisherman. It is a sheer waste of money to do this and have the fish brought to market by the hundreds of pounds.

Nazi Repression Accelerates Exodus of Saar Opposition

By the Associated Press.

The long heralded exodus of refugees from the Saar to Germany, started yesterday.

An unconfirmed report from Saarbrücken said five persons had been killed and several injured in post-plebiscite fighting. Several hundred self-exiles from the Saar streamed into French territory.

SAARBRÜCKEN.—A Nazi-controlled police force, occupying the building and leaders of the anti-Nazi "common front" took up residence in France.

Although Saarbrücken was quiet, rumors said disorders had occurred elsewhere. Six communists were reported to have been arrested. Three thousand Jews were said to be anxious to leave the basin.

GENÈVA.—A session of the League council scheduled formally to proclaim the Saar's reannexation to Germany was suddenly postponed. German sources said the French wanted certain Saar questions settled before date of transfer was fixed. League experts said March 1 was the likeliest date.

FORBACH, France.—Official inquiry brought out that four of several hundred self-exiles had been killed in France sought to turn back, only to be fired upon. French authorities made ready to harbour many thousand political refugees.

BERLIN.—Evidencing the reich's determination to be good to the re-annexed Saar were appeals urging to merchants and shoppers to prefer goods from Saar goods. Nazi economists, however, admitted difficulties of "the first magnitude" stand in the way of the transfer.

LONDON.—Great Britain favors the quickest possible delivery of the Saar to Germany, but official circles expressed opinion March 1 is the most practical date for the transfer.

GOVERNMENT BY LEAGUE DEFEATS TO PLEBISCITE WISHES.

SAARBRÜCKEN, Jan. 16.—Adolf Hitler's Saar opposition crumbled completely today and the Saar, in effect, passed into German hands.

The League of Nations government was still in nominal authority, but it was evident the League commissioners, who the day before the people, expressed in the Sunday plebiscite the 90 per cent pro-German vote, meant to stand to one side.

Governor Talmadge's first official act of his second administration was to appoint General Lindley W. Camp, of the Georgia National Guard, as commander of the Georgia National Guard. The governor had General Camp's commission prepared Wednesday morning and gave him his office immediately after delivering his inaugural address.

"I know of no better way to show my appreciation for your services," the governor told General Camp.

Mrs. Susie T. Moore, of Tifton, former member of the state senate, visited the senate and attended the inauguration.

Brigadier General Robert O. Van Horn, commanding officer at Fort McPherson, and regular army officers attached to the fourth corps area headquarters attended the inauguration in a body. Major General James M. Kimbrough Jr., retired former instructor of the Georgia National Guard, was with the group. Major General George V. H. Mosley, the corps area commander, was absent from the city but was represented by his chief of staff, Colonel Lorenzo Gasser.

Two members of the house and one member of the senate who are on the governor's staff staff with the staff of the inauguration. They were Senator Fred Scott, of Thomasville, and Representatives John Spivey, of Emanuel county, and L. O. Benton Jr., of Jasper county. Senator Scott, with General Camp, escorted the governor to the speaker's stand for the ceremony.

Chairman Hugh Howell, of the state democratic executive committee, who helped estimate the Talmadge crowd in the 1934 campaign, got a cheer when he estimated the inaugural crowd at 35,000. At that the hall was filled to overflowing from loudspeakers in the capitol corridors. Likewise the Representative Bond Almond, of Fulton county, announced that he had his bill incorporating the Georgia bar was ready for introduction. Under the terms of the bill all lawyers who were not at other times members of the bar association and directed to follow rules of the organization.

Among the guests at the inauguration was a large group of Talmadge supporters from Savannah, Chambliss county, included in this contingent was Mayor Thomas Gamble, the full county commission, Judge John R. Rife, Judge B. B. Hoey, Charlie Day and Andy Smith, hotel magnates; John Bouhan and Shelby Myrick.

INSTALLMENT XXIII.

Edythe stared at Jean suspiciously. There had seemed the faintest suggestion of an apology.

"Have it your own way," the caller snapped. The situation seemed to be slipping from her control. "But if you wish to know what I think..."

She paused in sheer amazement. She had forgotten the existence of those two mischievous dimples.

"I can't imagine anything more so interesting," Jean murmured. "If you'll excuse me now..."

The door had no sooner closed upon Edythe's angry exit than the pencil dropped from Jean's shaking fingers. Her head bent low over the board. Her face was buried in her two arms.

For a long time she sat there, motionless. Until a hasty rap on her door caused her to sit up and stare in a bewildered fashion. A salesgirl thrust her head into the studio.

"Somebody wants you on the phone outside, Miss Sawyer," it proved to be Nan Gamble.

"That's quite all right."

"Can you drop in here on your lunch hour... before you eat?"

"Why, I think so."

"Fine. I want to see you."

Jean hung up the receiver mechanically. What now?

"Hello," was Nan's cheery greeting when Jean came into the shop. "I've been upstairs playing around with a new salad. You're going to help me discuss it, as the books say. Are you game?"

"Of course. It must be that you're not very busy today."

"Just so-so. I think your place is beginning to get my trade. Think I can get a job there when the worst comes to the worst?"

"I'm sure you can. But there's no danger of that."

Jean was glad to find her friend in an unusually talkative humor. She had attempted to put some color in her cheeks before leaving the store, but it would be a difficult matter to disguise her shaken nerves should Nan become suspicious. The older woman was uncanny at times in her perceptions.

However, Miss Gamble rambled on in a garrulous fashion until the salad and coffee were out of the way. Then she startled Jean by demanding suddenly:

"How's the old chin?"

"My chin? Doesn't it look all right?"

She scrutinized the girl on the other side of the little table shrewdly. "I'm going to do a job of butting in. Do you mind?"

"Of course not, Nan."

"Well, it's like this. Miss Gamble seemed at loss to express her idea quickly. "You know, Gorgeous, this joint is a sort of clearing house for scandal. I never try to clamp a lid on it—too interesting," she conceded shamelessly. "But I've heard something lately that started me to wondering."

"And that was?" Jean asked it calmly.

"About our friend Sturges. The story is that he's all set to marry his job. I should say. Edythe is all set to marry him—at least that's the way it was slipped to me. Heard anything like that?"

"Yes."

"Think it's true?"

"Edythe told me as much—today."

"What?"

"She dropped in for a little chat this morning. Jean met Nan's gaze without flinching.

"Ah," Miss Gamble nodded. "her burnished head sagged. There was a sudden light of understanding in the hazel eyes. "Can you feature a Jane like that?" she demanded softly. "So that's what all the outburst of rage is about. She's not so sure about the boy friend, after all. Told you to keep your mitts off him, didn't she?"

"Of course not. Why should she?"

"Because you got her worried," Nan declared with a grin. "She's not a concern of mine."

"See here, Gorgeous—don't try that on me. I wasn't born last year. That Sturges man thinks a lot of you. He doesn't try to hide it. But I never would have put him down for a double-crosser, did I get it?"

"Please, Nan. Jean pushed back her chair and stood up. "It doesn't concern me in the least. I must go—the salad was lovely."

"Yes," Nan came over and laid one plump hand on the girl's slim shoulder. She placed the other under Jean's chin and looked steadily into the brown eyes that met her scrutinizingly, but there was a tenderness in the young body that did not escape the gentle hands.

"Okay, Gorgeous," was the verdict. "But I think I could kill anybody who hurt you. That's what I wanted to get you."

"No one is going to hurt me, Nan. Good-bye."

"Good-bye—wait a second. I'll walk down with you."

The several days following the concert had been highly unpleasant for Mark Sturges.

There had been no call from Edythe. No reason why there should be. Yet he started each time his telephone rang. Evidently, he would have to meet her. But the more time given that last scene to fade, the better. Better for both of them.

His conscience bothered him vaguely. He could not see that he had given Edythe any reason for that outspoken declaration. It amazed him. He should have prevented it, ought to have let her know in some way that he had no interest in her. But the thought of that made him more uncomfortable.

"Sounded as if he should have warned her. Not such a presumptuous ass as all that. A fine situation he had let himself in for."

And there was Jean.

The thought of her worried him afresh. He had encountered her once or twice in the store and fancied there was something chilling in her reserved greeting. What did she think of him? Why should she think of him? Edythe's interpretation of the concert incident was exaggerated—her saying that he did not take his eyes off Jean. Edythe was angry. And perhaps Jean was hurt. He had tried to tell her how much he valued her friendship.

Then let her sit a whole evening and watch him apparently enjoying the company of another. That scarcely was his fault. Jean had made it plain that she could not accept his attentions.

His reflections got him nowhere. Damn the Iron Block, anyway. He wished he might never have heard of it. More and more, however, he came to a conclusion that he must have a talk with Jean. If anything was wrong, he must know it. He would have a frank talk with her if necessary... try in some way to make her understand.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

CAPITALS OF EUROPE.
IX—Brussels, Belgium.

Brussels has been called "The Little Paris" and there is some reason for the name. The streets and customs of the city remind many persons of Paris. The French language is spoken in Brussels, which has a population of about 850,000. Greater Paris contains about four times as many people as Greater Brussels.

Belgium is a kingdom and has a long history. It obtained its name from the "Belgae," an ancient tribe which fought against the army of Julius Caesar. For close to five centuries, it was under the power of the Romans. In later times, it came into control of France, Germany, Spain and Austria, one after the other. Usually it shared the fate of its neighbor, Holland.

Taken together, Holland and Belgium were called "The Netherlands," but this name is now used especially for Holland. A little more than a century ago, the final separation took place between Holland and Belgium.

Brussels is the capital and largest city in Belgium. It is the home of the king and is the place where the parliament meets to make laws for the nation. The parliament is made up of senators and deputies who are chosen by vote of the people.

There was a time when Brussels had walls around it. There were eight gateways in the walls and 74 towers above them. In the year Belgium broke away from Holland the walls were taken down. At present there are streets which follow the course of the old walls.

Next to England, Belgium is the most thickly settled country in Europe. In 1930, it had an average of 98 persons to the square mile.

Belgium is a small country, but it owns a colony almost one-third as large as the United States. This colony is in Africa and is known as the Belgian Congo, or "the Congo Free State."

JACKETS LOSE TO VOLS, 36-26, AT AUDITORIUM

Laurence Hays Leads Scorers With Total of 16 Points.

Georgia Tech's Yellow Jackets, due mainly to their inability to control the tip-off, dropped their second straight college basketball game of the 1935 season to Major Bill Britton's team Tennessee tonight at the auditorium. The score was 36 to 26.

The Jackets hung close on the Vols' heels in the first half, which ended with Tennessee leading, 16 to 13. But in the last period, Andy Anderson, the Vols' center, found his shooting eye and Tennessee gradually pulled away.

The injection of Oliver Kidd, the youngster from Milledgeville, gave Tech a fresh impetus to start the last half, but the Jackets, who were losing the tip-off constantly with Anderson outpunching Hyder on every toss, soon fell behind.

Laurence Hays, one of Roy Mudd's sophomores, had a big night, leading players of both teams in scoring with 16 points, six field goals and four fouls, and playing a fine floor game. Anderson was next in high scoring honors with 13 points.

Billy Glenn played a nice game at back guard for Tech, but the Jackets' erratic shooting and lack of height handicapped them. Woodall, of Tech, went out on personal fouls in the last half, Kidd replacing him.

Tennessee's superiority in shooting fouls was a big advantage for the young Vols. The latter proved a clever passing team, also.

The defeat was Tech's third straight and second against college opposition, Clemson having won over the Jackets last Saturday night, 40-20. The Jackets go to Athens to play Georgia next Saturday night.

Baby Jackets Win Over Tech High.

In a preliminary to the Tech-Tennessee game, the Baby Jackets won an impressive victory over a good Tech High five, 51 to 23.

Starting slowly, during which time the Smiths gained a 9-to-0 advantage, the Baby Jackets, coached by Ed Jones and Hackett, led the way they surged on past the prepsters, never being in any real danger after the first quarter.

Ed Jones, with 12 points, led the scoring for the embryo Jackets, while Towery, with 8 points, starred for Tech High.

Down the Alley

The Junior Chamber of Commerce league will be the scene of one of the hottest series of basketball games this evening that has been bowled in a long time.

With Norfolk Candy Company and Haas-Howell-Dodd tied for the lead, and Wofford Oil Company and Signal Mountain Cement Company a single game out of the lead in second place, any one of these four teams can emerge as the champion after tonight's games.

Haas-Howell-Dodd are matched with Signal Mountain Cement Company. This match should arouse considerable additional interest from the closeness of the teams and the probable strength of the averages. Wofford Oil Company bowls Parks Printing Company; Norris Candy Company ties up with National Life Insurance Company.

Tonight's games bring the first half to a close, and with the first four teams so closely bunched, enthusiasm is way above par in this loop.

The Bell System league schedule for this evening is Western Electric vs. General Plant; Atlantic Mail vs. Accounting; General Plant vs. Maintenance Engineers; Atlanta Walnut vs. Plant Engineers; Traffic vs. District Maintenance; Equipment Engineers vs. A. T. & T. Company.

Captain T. G. Allen will take his Gresham Soda Fountain team, of the Businessmen's Duckpin league, to Dalton, Ga., for a match game with the Sinclair Refining Company team, of Dalton, this Saturday evening.

Dodgers Invited To Buy Reading

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—(AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers have an invitation from President F. B. Farrell, of the New York-Tennessee baseball league, to take over the Reading, Pa. franchise.

Rob Quinn, general manager of the Dodgers, was to go to Reading today to look over the situation and see whether it is advisable to take over the minor league Class A club as a farm.

The Coast Shows Us the Way in Football Officiating!

There was no doubt at all that football officiating in the south took a terrific slump last season.

The capable, young officials will admit it. Only a few, who try to put over the ridiculous idea that the official is a sacrosanct person who should be praised and never criticized, objected to criticism of the work last fall. The criticisms included old-fashioned ignorance of the rules, inability to cover plays because of poor physical condition, lack of responsibility on the part of the supporting cast.

I rather imagine the Southern officials in the Rose Bowl game, "Pup" Phillips and Moon Ducote, both capable men of whom there has been no criticism, came back with some new ideas.

They saw how a game should be covered. They saw that the responsibility was not limited to the referee but was placed equally upon the shoulders of each of the four officials.

In the coast technique even the head linesman becomes a real cog in the officiating, working in the field and not merely standing on the sideline calling the offside penalties.

The coast officials move up the umpire on the opposite side of the field when a touchdown seems probable; that is when the ball is close to the goal line. The referee does not call the touchdown unless it is one that hangs on over the line and is downed there. He asks the official who is closest to the head linesman or the umpire, who is on the line.

Our referees attempt to call touchdowns from a vantage point back of the ball in which position they can only guess, not know what has happened.

The responsibility is divided. For instance on the first Stanford touchdown, Pup Phillips, of Atlanta, was the official nearest the play. It was on his side of the field. It was a fairly close one to call.

"Was it a touchdown?" the referee asked Mr. Phillips.

"Yes," said Mr. Phillips, who had seen the ball go over.

Had that question been asked of most any one of our southern officials he would have been most embarrassed. The referee guesses at them down our way.

I understand that our officials have a quaint custom of crossing their arms in front if it is a touchdown or holding the arms behind the back if it isn't.

That is very cute but it is just a subterfuge for speaking out and saying what is what. What's wrong with saying Yes or No?

It usually happens that our referees are about the only ones within reach of the play. Most of our umpires and field judges are wheezing, unfit physical specimens who are trying to call plays 30 or 35 yards away from them.

Yet when this palladium of the public weal called attention to this condition last fall, some of the officials were very much hurt and objected very strenuously to the criticism. I never quite understood this attitude of protecting all the incompetents and insisting that all officials were good officials. It smacked of the ridiculous.

THE REVOLT OF YOUTH.

Unless I am very much mistaken the young officials are seething with revolt. I talked with three before the season ended.

"It burns me up," they said, "to work games with two or three fellows who can't cover the plays and who don't even try. We had several games like that."

"And it burns us up further to go out and work for a month or so before the season and get in shape to cover the games and then have to work with fellows who haven't worked a bit and whose total preparation for officiating has been putting on the uniform."

"Unless," they continued, "these fellows are weeded out then officiating in the south is going to continue to slump as it did last fall. Anyone who says it didn't is foolish."

This was from three officials who are tops in their profession—working big games each week.

The coast officiating is the best in the country. Their technique is the best. They keep the games going without long delays such as our officials create.

Herb Dana, the head of the coast organization, complimented our Mr. Phillips and our Mr. Ducote without stint. It is to be hoped the southern association of officials will listen to any suggestions they may have—if they have them, as I suspect they have. But I doubt if it will. Our boys are perfect. You can't even criticize them without making our boys very maddy, maddy.

THE COACHES PARTLY TO BLAME.

Our football coaches are largely to blame for this condition. They keep engaging the officials they know to be incompetent. And then moan about the officiating.

The officials' association is to blame for rating the incompetents as A-1 officials.

So where do we go from there? Meanwhile the coast football officiating rates first. Until last fall the south was second.

AND NOW, TO BASEBALL.

With this last polemic on the subject of football officiating, this corner is signing off football and turning toward other subjects.

What do you think about the baseball club now that Eddie Moore and Earl Mann are getting it shaped up for the 1935 season?

It looks very good. I'm not so sold on that pitching staff as yet. It would look better with the square frame of Mr. Harry Kelley out there chunking that baseball. But there yet is time.

One thing is sure. The boys like Eddie Moore and do not pull on their baseball bloomers every day with a curse for the manager and a hope that a foul ball may cook him one during the afternoon.

It is probably the best plan to be there opening day. One of these days we are going to have a winner. This may be the year. It's a long lane which has no turning, so they say. And our baseball lane has stretched a far piece already with no curves. At any rate the situation is much better than it was. The owners and directors are swell people.

RUTH, IN PARIS, PLANS TO PILOT CLUB OR QUIT

Says Reports He'll Play With Yanks Again With Wrong Guesses.

By Thomas W. Cope.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—(UP)—Babe Ruth definitely is through as a regular player and will stay out of baseball this year unless he is given a major league player-manager contract.

Ruth arrived today from Japan. He was accompanied by Mrs. Ruth and his daughter.

"I am definitely through as a regular," the Babe said. "But if I could get a good player-manager job I'd leap at it."

Ruth said that he had not considered with the Yankees club officials since just after the close of the 1934 season when he told them that he would no longer play as a regular.

Ruth said that he had been rumored to have failed to get a managerial post, he would try to take a regular turn with the Yankees.

"All I can say," Ruth added, "is that I plan to have a conference with Colonel (Jacob) Ruppert when I return to New York late next month."

Ruth said that he was not impressed by the islands of Bali and Java, over which other travelers often become enthusiastic.

"For one thing," he said, "I don't like Bali and Java women. They are too cheery and too black and they are too small and they simply can't pound the ball hard enough."

"The Better To Hit Them," Says Harry

Here is Harry Taylor, the Crackers' star first baseman, caught in the act of manual labor with the construction force that is busy remodeling and enlarging the bleachers at the ball park. Harry gave up a job in a department store to accept the outdoor job, so that he could toughen his hands and work off some excess poundage.

It is exemplary of the spirit of the Crackers players this year, who are all anxious for a good season under Eddie Moore. Taylor, who was an iron man at first base last year, hopes to get back to the big leagues in 1935. He was up with the Chicago Cubs two years ago. Constitution staff photo-graph.

BURT INGWERSEN CONFIRMS ACTION

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 16.—(AP)—Burt A. Ingwersen this afternoon formally confirmed the announcement that he had been named first assistant football coach at Northwestern, and said he had accepted the appointment.

Ingwersen, assistant coach and line coach at Louisiana State University the past three years and formerly head coach at Iowa, will leave L. S. U. through mutual agreement of his contract with the local university, which will have a year to run, it was stated.

President James M. Smith expressed regret at Ingwersen's departure.

Ingwersen given Contract Release.

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 16.—(AP)—Announcement of mutual agreement of Burt A. Ingwersen's contract as assistant football coach at Louisiana State University to permit him to take a similar post at Northwestern, and that Burt Ingwersen had signed a three-year contract as L. S. U. head coach was made today by university authorities.

It was stated that Ingwersen, appointed first assistant to Lynn O. Waldorf, new Northwestern head coach, had been released from his contract at Louisiana State which still has a year to run.

Moore, it was announced, signed a three-year contract as successor to Captain Laurence "Biff" Jones at $25,000 a year, the same amount Jones received.

Ingwersen will remain at L. S. U. to help with spring practice and go to Northwestern for spring training there.

GOOD FOR MUSCLES.

That is exactly what Handsome Harry Taylor did a few days ago, so that he could work off a little extra plus flesh and get hardened for 154 games of baseball with the Crackers. And it may be added that Harry, right now, besides his 154 pounds of his seasonal playing weight, which is around 185.

Last year, Taylor played in every one of the Crackers' games and did a swell job of first basing. He batted well above .300 for most of the season but slumped badly in the latter part of the campaign.

We found Harry wielding a crowbar, driving spikes and already talking about baseball. He was the first Crackers regular to sign his contract and likes Atlanta so well that he and Mrs. Taylor are wintering here.

The bleachers when the remodeling job is complete, will seat 800 more spectators, which will be a big help on opening day and for the big home games. Harry Taylor, who is a beautiful and graceful fielder for a big fellow, particularly on hard-hit ground balls and "line drives" and is an artist at making the difficult reverse double play.

Taylor also enjoys the distinction of being the only left-handed hitter in the regular Crackers' lineup thus far this year. Black, the rookie second baseman just signed, has the only right hand, but he is about the only one on the team who does not.

"We ought to have a pretty good ball club this year," declared Harry between haunts—being as he is a regular Crackers' fan— "and I think we ought to have a lot more power than it did last year and the rest of the club ought to stack up pretty well."

Like most of the other Crackers interviewed on the subject, the Atlanta outfielder of Oona, Harris and Easterling, a trio of long range guns, is Taylor's favorite subject.

"PRINCE IS DANGEROUS."

"Last year, Oona was the only man we had who was really a dangerous home run hitter and now we have

EX-PILOT HERE DUE TO SCOUT FOR SENATORS

Expected To Ask for Release Here in Case He Connects.

By Jimmy Jones.

According to reliable reports from Washington, D. C., Spencer Abbott, erstwhile manager of the Atlanta Crackers, is about to make a connection with the Washington Senators as a scout, either in 1935 or 1936.

It has been generally known that Abbott, while he retains the title of an advisory director of the Crackers, will not return to Atlanta in any capacity in 1935 and that he would very likely seek an active job with another club—possibly a big league club.

Abbott, however, will be paid his 1935 salary in full, since he signed a contract to manage the club this year before Eddie Moore was installed as the team's pilot.

The veteran skipper said before leaving here last fall that he would not scout for the Crackers and that if he became a scout at all, it would be with a big league club.

Abbott, who resides in Washington, has been friendly with Clark Griffith, the Senators' owner, for a long time and according to word from that city, may serve that club either in a scouting or coaching capacity.

If Abbott does swing the Washington job, chances are he will ask for some sort of settlement with the Atlanta club, which would make him free to go with the Senators.

Although assured of getting his money from Atlanta each year during the season, Abbott could not be under contract to two clubs and draw money from both. He would have to get his release here.

He may decide to "lay off" this season, and return to baseball next season, as Johnny Dobbs did in 1932 when he had a contract to manage Atlanta, but was not brought back to fill it.

At any rate, Spencer is assured of getting a salary and thereby maintains his reputation in baseball for never being without a job. The Atlanta club does not want to stand in Abbott's way to making a connection with another team, which will make the pathway easier for him.

BRITTON PLANS FEW CHANGES; DODD IS OUT

By Jimmy Jones.

Major William H. (Bill) Britton, the grey-eyed army officer whom destiny sought out for the job of head coach at University of Tennessee after eight years of coaching Major Bob Neyland, plans only one more addition to the Vols' coaching staff.

"We are not exactly sure whether he will be back field coach or line coach, but you may be assured that we are going to get the best man obtainable, regardless of whether he is an alumnus or not," the major stated last night following his team's 36-20 victory over Georgia Tech.

The major, at the same time, spiked reports that Bobby Dodd, present back field coach at Tech, was being considered for the job.

DODD TO STAY.

"I talked with Bobby about it today and from someone I met that he was perfectly satisfied at Georgia Tech and that he would not care to make a change just now," the major added.

Britton also stated that Eugene McEver, former backfield main of Dodd's and often cited by Major Neyland as the greatest backfield man he ever coached at Tennessee, had been considered among many others, but nothing definite regarding him had been done. McEver has been coaching at Davidson.

Major Britton, himself, will have charge of the backfield since that has been his capacity on the staff. He plans to start spring work soon and has about 20 freshmen to work into the Tennessee eleven.

PLANS NO CHANGE.

He plans no change in the system with which he and Colonel Paul Parker and Neyland have been so successful. Colonel Parker will remain as athletic director and end coach, with Jesse Barnhill, former All-Southern guard, continuing as freshman coach.

Major Faust, who has been assisting Britton with the backfield, also remains in that capacity, which increases the likelihood that the new Tennessee assistant will be a line coach. An announcement will be made soon.

Major Britton, while he enjoys coaching basketball and is very fond of that sport, will have to be relieved of this job next year by someone, probably Faust.

The major is still hopeful that Tech and Tennessee will get together on the gridiron before long and talked some with Tech officials while here. There is a possibility of a game in the near future, as soon as some of Tech's present contracts expire.

Gulf Plays J. P. C. Tonight at Russell

In an effort to avenge their defeat of last week the Gulf team will present a revised lineup against the fast-stepping J. P. C. tonight at 8 o'clock, on the Russell High court.

Although they have come out on the losing end of the score in several games, the Gulf boys have not been behind at the halfway mark in any of their contests.

With the prospect of a scoring combination being developed that will ring the basket in both halves, the Gulfers are expecting to give the J. P. C. team a real battle.

Captain MacKechnie Resigns as Coach at Mississippi State

MAJOR SASSE IS REPORTED AS SUCCESSOR

School Head Silent on Change; Students Bring Action.

STARKVILLE, Miss., Jan. 16.—(P)—Captain A. R. MacKechnie, for the past two years head football coach at Mississippi State College, today tendered his resignation to athletic board of control.

President G. D. Humphrey declined to comment on the resignation. It was not learned who will succeed the former University of Washington star, however, reports were current that Major Ralph Sasse, former Army coach at West Point and now stationed at Fort Knox, would be named.

As news of MacKechnie's resignation spread over the campus President Humphrey went into conference with the athletic board of control presumably to discuss the local coaching situation.

There has been much agitation since the end of the 1934 football season for a switch in the coaching staff at Mississippi State, led by the alumni.

The Maroons experienced a mediocre season and suffered a heart-breaking defeat at the hands of their arch rivals, Ole Miss, in the final game.

MacKechnie succeeded Ray Dauber as head coach two years ago.

COLORED FIVES PLAY TONIGHT

Two outstanding colored basketball teams will play at 8 o'clock tonight on the Sunset Casino court, when the Renaissance team of New York meets the Atlanta All-Stars.

The New York team has the best record of any colored team in the country, winning 88 consecutive games last year.

The All-Stars are made up from Atlanta colored players and have played some good games this year. The Atlanta team has been practicing with the various colored teams around the city for several weeks.

Half of the game will be played under professional rules and the other half will be governed by the college rules.

A large section of the stands has been reserved for white patrons and tickets are on sale at Parks-Chambers Company.

Both teams are undefeated thus far this season.

Big Pointer Takes Lead At Albany

ALBANY, Ga., Jan. 16.—(P)—Overshadowing performances of the 15 other entries which had shown during the first two days running of the continental all-age stake, Dr. Blue Willing, black and white pointer owned by L. D. Johnson, of Evansville, Ind., today took the lead in the race for top money of the $1,000 event.

The big pointer, stylish, speedy and with beautiful form on points, made so few mistakes today that they were virtually negligible, and experienced dog followers gave him top honors for that portion of the field that has run thus far.

With the concluding braces to be run tomorrow, there seemed little likelihood that the Johnson dog could be beaten. Dr. Blue Willing had four very fine finds for the day and never once was off course.

Homeward Green Willow, which ran in the same brace, had only a single find, as did Norias Roy Jr., Air Pilot Sam, which also ran under the Johnson colors, had one covey and a single.

Martez John and Bailey's Proctor Mike each had two finds. Homeward Flirtations, one of the winners at the trials last year, was lost twice during his brace and finally was taken up by his handler. The pointer made two finds, however, despite his trouble.

Jake Seaview Rex, last dog to run today, nosed out two berries.

WINN FACING TOUGH MATCH

Hugh Winn, one of Atlanta's most popular wrestlers, will face one of his toughest battles Friday night when he goes against Jim Heslyn, the big Australian champion, in a handicap match at the city auditorium.

The Australian has agreed to beat Winn two falls within an hour's time or forfeit his share of the purse. Heslyn is a big, powerful grappler and is confident he can turn the trick. But he will have no picnic against Winn. The Atlanta boy is really a tough fellow to deal with and knows plenty about wrestling. He is a former holder of the southern light heavyweight title.

This match precedes the one between Black Jack Ross, the tough Chicago Greek, and John Mauldin, another outstanding southern wrestler. Mauldin is an Atlanta boy and has been wrestling for a long time. He is expected to give the tough Ross a real battle. This match is the feature of Promoters Roby and Bettis' weekly card.

In the opening 30-minute match, the Atlanta policeman wrestler, Glenn Cowan, will meet tough opposition in Charlie Norman, Grant Park kid boy. This match will be a thriller from the start, as both boys are willing mixers and each is confident of victory.

GEORGIA BEATS PRESBYTERIAN; MAYO IS STAR

Substitute Gets Chance and Scores 19 Points To Lead Team.

By Bill Ray.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 16.—Led by Albert Maso, dashing forward who scored 19 points, the Georgia Bulldogs rode rough-shod over Presbyterian College basketball five here tonight in Woodruff Hall to win, 45 to 25.

Georgia, using an improved passing attack, had little difficulty in checking the Blue Stockings offensive while the Bulldogs rolled in 20 field goals with apparent ease.

Harrison Anderson, Marietta co-captain of the Bulldogs, was second in scoring honors with 10 points but the uncanny eye of Maso put him far out in front for high-point laurels.

GEORGIA HANDICAPPED.

Georgia was handicapped by the injury of Charlie Harold, sophomore center, who was kept out of the game on account of a cut lip. Dan Bowden, Atlanta forward, was shifted to center and played an excellent game despite the fact that Roy Forehand, Blue Stocking center, had the edge on Bowden in height.

With this shifting Albert Maso, Savannah boy, started the game at forward. Maso has been a substitute forward this season but in tonight's game he proved his worth in offensive playing.

For Presbyterian Allen Levi, diminutive forward, led the Blue Stockings' attack and tied with Anderson, of the Bulldogs, for second high score with 10 points. Levi, due to his smallness in stature, was probably the most spectacular player for the Blue Stockings but Frank Waldrop, forward, turned in a consistent game on both offensive and defensive play. Roy Forehand, Presbyterian forward, was also outstanding for the Blue Stockings.

THREE FORWARDS.

With the improved play of Maso, Coach Enright now has three excellent forwards in Frank Johnson, co-captain, Dan Bowden and Maso.

The lineups:

Total points 45 25

PRESBYTERIAN (25)—PG. F. TP. Waldrop, F. 0 1 1 Wyatt, F. 1 0 2 Levi, F. 4 2 10 Forehand, G. 0 0 0 Coker, C. 0 0 0 Adams, G. 2 0 4 Steinberg, G. 0 0 0 Bradley, G. 0 1 1

Total points 25 45

Score at half: Georgia 18; Presbyterian 14. Referee, Hollis, Georgia.

George Lott And Stoefen 'Clean Up'

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—(P)—With fame behind them and fortune as their goal, George Martin Lott Jr., and Lester Rolfe Stoefen, latest recruits to professional tennis, earned slightly more than $6,000 each in their first week as play-for-pay racket wielders.

While Lott and Stoefen and their barnstorming partners, Bill Tilden and Ellsworth Vines took things easy today in New Haven before appearing there in an exhibition tomorrow night, Promoter Bill O'Brien announced that the gross receipts thus far of the three-month tour which opened in Madison Square Garden here a week ago, amounted to $49,069.52.

Lott and Stoefen quit the amateur ranks last fall, signing contracts with O'Brien for "cuts" in the gross receipts amounting to 13-1-2 per cent each. At that rate last year's world double champions have realized $6,135 each from six eastern exhibitions. Vines' share is reported to be 20 per cent, while O'Brien and Tilden, part of the promotion concern, split the remainder.

At its present rate of drawing power the tour is approximately 20 per cent behind the income received from the first week of the 1934 barnstorming campaign, which featured Vines' debut as a professional, and included the Frenchman, Henri Cochet, and Martin Pias, along with Tilden, for the corresponding period a year ago gross receipts were $62,847.

OUT OF SONS.

For the time being he has run out of sons. The three have been three in the past, Marion, Frank and Eddie.

When these stalwart boys were coming to the fore, Lott and Stoefen and Causer formed two keystone pairs that may click. Anderson hopes that at least one pair will produce. If this develops, half-brother is won.

Anderson believes in going to have the finest center fielder in southern college circles. Ralph Bowen can go and get them, so to speak, and he can hit.

OUTFIELDERS.

Sullivan and Moon are two other excellent outfield prospects. Buster Fisher returns at third base and Andy Johnson is back for an end spot at first base.

Ed Copeland, Lawrence Wade, Braden and Shannon happen to be the leading pitching prospects. Ogilvie will play 17 games this spring—four each with Tech, Georgia and Auburn—and five others.

Joe Knight, of Cairo, Ga., the south's leading light heavyweight, and Tony Shucro, of Boston, also will appear on the card. Shucro is the only one of the principals not here now.

Auburn Grid Stars Play Basketball

AUBURN, Ala., Jan. 16.—Holding down regular positions on Alabama Poly's 1935 basketball team are three lettermen on Auburn's football squad last season. They are Cleve Brown, senior from Montgomery; Joel Eaves, sophomore from Atlanta, Ga., both guards, and Joe Bob Mitchell, sophomore from Alexander City, center. On the gridiron Eaves won a letter at end, Brown at quarterback and Mitchell at halfback.

KEYSTONE PAIR OFFER PROBLEM TO ANDERSON

Petrel Baseball Coach Loses Battery and Star Infielders.

By Jack Troy.

Barring losses of a fine college battery, Lefty Dixon and Happy Vance, a crack second baseman, Eddie Anderson; a dependable shortstop, McGinty, and a steady outfielder, Belton Clark, Coach Frank Anderson, of Ogilvie, has nothing to worry about in the college baseball race that's coming up.

Anderson, one of the finest college baseball coaches in the south, usually produces a nine that finishes well in the race.

When he calls the candidates out in March, however, he will face a really tough job. He must develop a strong team, a combination of the best of the vital part of any baseball team and Anderson has lost both his shortstop and second baseman.

OUT OF SONS.

For the time being he has run out of sons. The three have been three in the past, Marion, Frank and Eddie.

'Y' Triangles Win Here, 52-28

The Atlanta Y. M. C. A. Triangles had little trouble in taking the Beckley College Hawks, 52 to 28, on the Luckie street court last night. The game started slowly with Beckley leading the Hawks, 10 to 0, in the first half. The Triangles rallying to take the lead at 17 to 12 at the midway point. In the last half the Triangles really got going and the game started to crumble in so fast that the West Virginia boys went up in the air and never got back down. The play was fast but clean.

Virlyn Moore was again the big gun for the locals with 14 points, while Johnny Phillips was close behind with 12. 10 of which came in the last half. Hudson and Underwood also had their eyes on the basket, getting nine points each. The players of Marion, Tate and Kelly was also good.

THE PORTLIGHT

THE WINNING SIDE OF GOLF.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 16.—In the wake of the scrappy Los Angeles open, two pretty fair golfers dropped by the room to talk things over. Their names were Walter Hagen and Gene Sarazen, who have won far more than their share of gilded coronets and have had more than one famous duel at medal and match play during the last 13 or 14 years.

I wanted to get their slant upon the main points of championship golf—the main difference between the winners and those who almost won—but never quite.

California Warden Slugged, Six Are Kidnaped in 'Break'

SAN QUENTIN, Cal., Jan. 16.—(AP)—Four San Quentin prison convicts slugged Warden James B. Holohan and kidnaped six men to escape today, only to meet recapture.

Two tense hours of pursuit and battle ended in the serious wounding of one convict, the surrender of three others, the wounding of two hostages. The break—the most amazing in the history of crowded San Quentin—came as members of the state board of prison terms and paroles gathered for luncheon in Warden Holohan's residence.

The convicts broke out with a withering gunfire that held the officers off while they fled northward again.

Chase Hampered.
Thousands of officers on the trail were doubly hampered by the use of the captive officials as hostages and by reports that the convicts had dressed in the clothing of their captives.

Two Later Shot.
Quickly the prisoners seized Frank C. Rykes, San Francisco contractor and board chairman, later shot in the hip; Warren Atherton, Stockton attorney; Joseph Stephens, Sacramento banker, wounded slightly in the abdomen; and Mark E. Noon, the board's secretary.

Two state automobiles in front of the warden's residence served for the getaway. Holding the board officials in one car and forcing Lieutenant Harry Jones and Sergeant C. L. Dosse, to ride on the running boards, the convicts sped toward the back gate.

Noon was forced to give the signal to guards to allow them to pass. The car sped west through San Rafael to the Redwood highway and then to the north—the only avenue of escape from the grim walls housing the largest prison population in the United States, 6,000 men.

Most of northern California officials soon was on the trail.

Leader in Break.
The convicts were led by Rudolph Straight, 35, "bad boy," who previously had made two desperate attempts to escape. Unconformed reports said Straight was the fugitive who had been shot. He apparently had three confederates.

They were named as Alex McKay, 28; Joe Cristy, 26, and Fred Alender, 27.

The felons surrendered to county and state officers at Valley Ford, 54 miles from the prison.

Running through two barricades across the highway, they got to Novato, about 10 miles north of the prison, where pursuing police overtook them.

The convicts then cut loose with withering gunfire that held the officers off while they fled northward again.

MACON, Ga., Jan. 16.—(AP)—A local automobile dealer has caused to be thankful because his caution saved him $1,850.

HOMEOWNERS END WORK IN AVIATION

Atlanta Publisher Asserts He Will Refuse Offers of Permanent Post.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—(AP)—Clark Howell, chairman of the federal aviation commission, said today "under no circumstances" would he accept appointment on any commission set up to succeed the body he heads.

The commission was understood to have been a recommendation of an agency, independent of the interstate commerce commission, he created to guide the destinies of air travel.

Howell considers aviation work in his infancy and "on the threshold of development," and the commission probably will recommend appointing it under I. C. C. at once, on the contention that body will have its hands full co-ordinating railway, highway and water travel.

Indications were, however, under the program worked out by Howell and his colleagues, the president would be given power by executive order, when he deems advisable, to merge the aviation commission into the I. C. C. to be administered with the authority now held over railroads.

The commission already has left a tentative draft of its recommendations with Mr. Roosevelt. It will go to the White House tomorrow to hear his suggestions, and the chairman expected the commission report to be sent to congress the latter part of next week.

Howell said he had given six months to Grayson to the study of aviation and working out a co-ordinated program, and that now he must get back to his work in Atlanta. He is editor and publisher of The Atlanta Constitution.
